PYF Names Outstanding Farmers, Elects Officers

BY LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER — The Pennsylvania Young Farmers peppered their state convention with workshops, awards, fun and food for the 276 attendees.

The two-day convention held at Willow Valley Conference Center, Lancaster, climaxed by naming the outstanding state farmers and installing new officers.

Axel Linde and his wife, Susan, earned the outstanding young farmer under 30 award. The Linde's farm 211 acres in southern Lancaster county in partnership with Axel's sister, Millie. They have 50 Guernseys and plan to add another 20 this spring. Linde said, "We put an emphasis on pastures by using intensive grazing for 200 days a year."

The Lindes have a rolling herd average 15,770, 700 pounds butterfat and 560 protein.

In the over 30 young farmer division, Barb and Karl Herr, Solanco, captured the state honor. The Herrs farm 450 acres, have 60 head of beef, and 95 dairy cows with a rolling herd average of 19,000 and 690 pounds butterfat.

Herr said the most unusual thing about their farm is that they use all no-till farming on their corn, soybeans and alfalfa fields. They also installed a manure storage facility.

Regional winners in the outstanding young farmer under 30 included Timothy and Denise Wetzel, Snyder PYF chapter; Ken Sanner, Kutztown Chapter; and Brian and Angie Platt, Berlin Brothers Valley Chapter.

Regional over 30 winners included the following: Frank and Lucinda Reist, Cedar Crest Lebanon Chapter; Charles and Kim Wells, Snyder; and Jay and Eyvonne Shaffer, Berlin Brothers Valley Chapter; and Cindy and Alan Zepp of Gettysburg Chapter.

New Attorney General Keynotes PA Cornucopia

BY EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

HERSHEY—With a sermon-type delivery, Ernest D. Preate, Jr., the new State Attorney General, took his state drug reform goals to the people here Monday evening at the 1989 Keystone Cornucopia. Preate said no rural community in Pennsylvania was immune from drug traffic. In fact, he claimed that the drug problem is growing seven times faster in the rural areas largely because isolated farms are used for laboratories, farmland is used to grow marijuana, and rural roads are used to avoid state police.

While Preate has been in office

Trotacre Farm Has Two High State Record Cows

BY CAROLYN HILSDON GILLES
Crawford Co. Correspondent

As if the honor of having high cow in the state were not enough, the Trotters of Enon Valley, Lawrence County have produced two-- a Guernsey high in milk and fat and the high Holstein in the state. To what do they attribute such a phenomenal track record? According to the Trotters, genetics plays a major role, along with a good feeding program and good forages. The Trotters feed grain five times a day and hay at night--all done with extra TLC. And they take pains to do all the little things right!

Trotacre Farms, a Dairy of Distinction in 1987, has been in the Trotter family for 46 years. At one time predominately a Golden Guernsey Herd, the herd is now divided evenly between Guernsey and Holstein. They also raise horses, specializing in trotting breeds with about a dozen mares, but their main income is from dairy. The Trotters milk about 91 cows twice daily in 63 tie stalls. They milk the middle two rows then alternate rows.

They raise their own replacements and grow their own feed: high moisture corn, alfalfa haylage and corn silage to which they

Acres Corn Update: Corn futures settled lower this afternoon on selling fueled by sharp losses in the soy complex. Today's closes were slightly higher than recent contract lows with some buying noted under the post harvest and post crop report low of $2.64 on the March option. Further pressure was linked to a slack near term export outlook along with news that Egypt had purchased French Maize instead of U.S. Corn. Underlying support was provided by slack country movement and steady cash basis levels. March cloed at $2.64-3/4 after trading to a low of $2.63 shortly before the close.

Acres Soybean Update: Soybean futures closed sharply lower, but off session lows today on session long selling in sympathy with a 12 week low in meal. Support earlier in the day was negated by the sell-off along with forecasts for light rainfall in Brazil. Ideas that a potentially larger Brazilian crop will offset any losses sustained in Argentina supplied additional pressure. March beans traded to a low of $7.41-1/2 shortly before noon and ended the day 11-1/2 cents lower at $7.46.

Acres Wheat Update: Wheat futures prices closed mostly one cent higher as early gains were pared by sharp losses in the soy complex. Support throughout the day was provided by news that the USSR was bidding today for 600,000 metric tonnes of export bonus wheat along with forecasts for less than adequate moisture for parts of the hard red belt. Underlying support also was provided by a light supply of deliverable wheat stored in Chicago. March, May and July all settled one cent higher while the September gained only 1/2 cent.

Acres Cattle Update: Live and feeder cattle ended today's session mixed to mostly higher in light trading. Many participants were sidelined in advance of this afternoon's USDA Cattle Inventory Report which was expected to show yearling supplies available for feedlots to be down from 3 to 5% from last year. Initial support on the opening was attributed to strong cash fundamentals.
The USDA Cattle Inventory Report, released after the close was termed bearish and is as follows:
USDA-89 as ESTIMATES a %AGE OF 88 AVG. RANGE Cattle & Calves Jan 1 100% 98.6 97.7-100.0 Beef Replacement 105% 99.7 98.0-101.0 Steers-500 lbs & Over 100% 97.8 96.8- 98.1
CME FEEDER CATTLE SETTLEMENT PRICE: 02/06/89 -$83.64 02/03/89 -$83.61
ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK: cash -steady to weak futures-steady to lower

Acres Hog Update: Live hog futures closed higher this afternoon from 10 to 65 points as an improved cash tone coupled with ideas the pit had become oversold provided support. Ideas that futures had established a major bottom supplied further strength. This morning's firmer cash market openings along with steady to higher wholesale values underpinned prices in addition to the unwinding of Cattle/Hog bear spreads tied to profit taking. Some positioning in advance of today's USDA Cattle Inventory report was noted. Bellies settled lower this afternoon as pressure from large kills continued.
ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK: cash - steady futures - steady

February 8, 1989

Buying interest was mixed and selective, best on tight supplies of leg items, cautious on the balance. Cutlets were adequate to fully adequate with some boners trimming production to keep pace with demand. Whole breasts were adequate for a light to fair and generally unaggressive call. Legs and leg quarters remained in tight supply and inter-dealer trading was fairly active to balance needs. Yellow wings were fully adequate while white wings were noted in close balance.

If you're a feeder pig producer, you want to get top performance out of your operation.

Producing feeder pigs takes good management, and the ability to make the most of every part of your operation. You've got to use your breeding stock and buildings to their maximum potential. A big part of getting maximum output is the right nutrition program. It can make the difference in maintaining sows in good condition and producing large, healthy feeder pigs that are able to withstand the stress of being moved from your operation to another location for finishing.

You want to maximize your sows reproductive potential and produce large, healthy litters.

Pennfield has specially formulated two sow feeds that do just that. Our 642 Sow Prep is a complete feed formulated to nourish the sow during gestation. This feed provides all the energy and protein required for building large healthier litters.

We developed 648 Sow Power to provide sows with a unique blend of energy, amino acids, and other nutrients needed for optimum milk production. This results in maximum 21-day baby pig weights. Heavier pigs mean healthier pigs after weaning. 648 Sow Power enables the sows to finish the lactation period in good condition for the beginning of the next breeding cycle.

You want faster weight gains and optimum feed efficiency for your feeder pigs

Pennfield offers three complete feeds for this purpose. 603 Pig Power was developed specifically for successful three week weaning. Pigs weaned at three weeks need special care and nutrition to minimize the stress of going from a whole milk diet to dry feed.

604 Pig Power is an excellent starter for a four week weaning program. A transitional feed from suckling or from the early wean 603 Pig Power. The results are healthy economical gains during an important growth stage.

616 Pork Power I is an excellent high density feed, formulated with supplementary lysine to give optimum balance of essential amino acids. It also has added fat to assure economical weight gain and feed efficiency coming out of the nursery.

If you're a feeder pig producer, you want Pennfield's specially formulated hog feeds.

OPINION

The Milk Kick

Milk may be America's health kick, but many people are in the dark when it comes to what's in it. According to a new Penn State study, a surprising number of consumers continue to be confused about how much fat is in the milk they drink.

In two phone surveys, 1,900 people were asked questions about changes in the foods they consume, including milk. In one part of the survey, respondents were asked to give the amount of fat in whole, low-fat and skim milk. The results showed that people really did not know the fat content of these different types of milk.

When respondents throughout the United States were asked to give the fat content of whole milk, two-thirds of the people answered that they did not know the amount, and 20 percent overestimated. Whole milk actually has a fat content of 3.25 percent. People in the surveys did better with low-fat milk, which is usually labeled as containing 1 or 2 percent milk fat. Forty percent of the survey respondents said they didn't know and 9 percent over-estimated. Skim milk - with less than .1 percent milk fat- is virtually fat free, but 60 percent of the respondents said they didn't know while 10 percent overestimated the amount of fat. When people in a separate Pennsylvania sample were questioned, their responses were similar.

The results seem to indicate that many people are making decisions about their milk consumption without specific information. This is especially surprising in the case of low-fat milk, which often has the amount of milk fat printed on the container.

The study was conducted to learn why people do or do not drink milk. Robert Herrmann, Blair Smith and Rex Warland, researchers in Penn State's Department of Rural Sociology and Agricultural Economics, coordinated the two phone surveys, one for the United States and one for Pennsylvania. Their primary purpose was to determine some of the attitudes and reasons why people have increased or decreased their milk consumption. The researchers' interest in the fat question was related. "Since concern about fat is believed to be one of the culprits in the decrease in milk consumption, we wanted to see if the public was aware of the facts," says Warland.

In both the United States and the Pennsylvania samples, many people said they have adjusted their diets because of health reasons. A large number of people reported they were cutting back on eggs, pork and beef while eating more fish, chicken, fruits and vegetables. But less than one-fourth of the respondents reported that they have changed the amount of milk they drink. For those who have changed, somewhat more have increased milk consumption than decreased it. Nationwide, 14 percent have increased the amount of milk they drink while 10 percent have decreased. The results for Pennsylvania were nearly identical.

Other responses also indicated that people are changing their diets for health reasons. Nearly half of those who had increased the amount of milk they drink cited calcium and other health reasons for drinking more milk. Health played a role in the decreasers' profile as well - the most frequent reasons given for drinking less milk included reducing calorie, fat and cholesterol intake. Taste figured in the amounts both increased and decreased, though taste was less significant than health concerns.

In the same study, many people who responded indicated they had decreased or increased certain types of food because of health reasons; yet few claimed they had changed the amount of milk they drink.

It's good to know that most people think of milk as healthful and not fat. Alot of credit for this positive public attitude toward milk must go to the dairy farmers who have spent hard-earned money on promotional efforts.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Be Aware Of Milker's Knee

Everyone knows about tennis elbow, but who has ever heard of "milker's knee"? Dairy producers may have this form of degenerative arthritis without being aware of it. The condition occurs from the squatting, bending and lifting that dairy farmers must do when attaching milkers to cows standing at floor level.

This wearing away of cartilage in the joints is most common among dairy farmers. The first sign is usually pain in the knees. Family and friends may notice that the person is becoming bowlegged. Other signs include frequent loss of balance; swelling, locking, stiffening, or giving out of the knees; and a grinding or snapping noice when bending.

A knee injury can develop into milker's knee but people who have never had a knee injury can be affected. Some farmers simply may have inherited the problem, especially if the family has a history of arthritis.

Dr. Dennis Murphy, Safety Specialist at Penn State, tells us that the most important preventive is to avoid squatting. Instead, kneel on one knee and wear knee pads. If you consult a physician at the first sign of trouble, you can probably keep the condition from becoming worse.

To Recognize Lime For Weed Control

You have never heard us recommend lime for weed control; however, indirectly lime is important to obtain good herbicide weed control. Both research and farm experience has indicated that herbicides are not as effective in sour soil. So, for best control with chemicals, the soil-test requirement must be satisfied.

Many poor weed control experiences have been reported on sour soils. A complete soil test will indicate the amount of lime needed. There are many other advantages to crop production in addition to better herbicide action.

To Be Aware That Cow's Nutrition Affects Calf's Survival

The nutritional status of a cow during her last three months of pregnancy can affect the vigor of her newborn calf and its ability to survive exposure to the cold conditions and calfhood diseases, according to Glenn Shirk, Extension Dairy Agent.

Researchers at the Colorado Agriculture Experiment Station showed that calves, born of dams that were deficient in protein during the last three months of pregnancy, produced less body heat during the first 12-24 hours following their birth. This affected their ability to withstand cold, wet conditions. To reduce this risk, feed calves additional energy and provide them with a clean, dry, draft-free place to rest during cold weather.

Equally important is the cow's condition, or state of flesh, at time of calving. Cows that are either over-conditioned or under-conditioned generally have more problems at calving time. This stresses both the cow and her calf. Needless to say, proper nutrition for the pregnant cow is very important.

To Keep Small Children Away From Machinery

The spring cropping season will be starting in another month. That means that a lot of farm machines will be put into operation and things will really be moving. Small children like to become a part of this action and ask to ride on machinery, or even operate some of the smaller tractors. It might take nerve to refuse them at times; however, for their own protection they should not become involved. Many serious accidents have happened because "Dad" or "Grandad" took them along.

Where there are small children, all machinery operators should be especially careful of their exact location. Farm machinery and small children do not mix.

The Penn State Cooperative Extension is an affirmative action, equal opportunity educational institution.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

UNCLEAN! UNCLEAN!

February 12, 1989

Background Scripture:
Leviticus 13: 9-17, 45-46; Luke 17:11-19.

Devotional Reading:
Psalms 105: 1-5.

That's what a leper was commanded by Mosaic law to call whenever he or she was in the proximity of other people. "Unclean! Unclean! Be careful not to come near to me so that you will be contaminated!" Although this might appear as an appropriate health measure to prevent the spread of the disease, that was not the purpose of the Mosaic law. A person with leprosy — and people with other physical conditions including childbirth — was thought to be spiritually unclean and anyone who associated with people such as this were likely to become spiritually contaminated themselves.

The Mosaic law also proscribed that the leper "shall wear torn clothes and let the hair of his head hang loose, and he shall cover his upper lip..." (Leviticus 13:45). Furthermore, "he shall dwell alone in a habitation outside the camp" (13:46). No law-abiding Jew was to have any contact or relationship with these people.

HEALED AS THEY WENT

So, you can better appreciate the importance of Jesus' encounter with the ten lepers on his way to Jerusalem via Samaria. On the one hand, these ten lepers went strictly by the law, for as Luke tells us, they "stood at a distance and lifted up their voices..." (Luke 17:11). On the other hand, however, they dared to challenge the system in asking Jesus to heal them. They knew that in doing so, he himself would be likely regarded as "unclean" by the religious authorities. It is interesting that Luke doesn't say Jesus touched them or even spoke of healing. He simply told them to present themselves to the priests in the temple and "as they went they were cleansed" (17:14).

This incident with the ten lepers may seem to have little relevance to us, in as much as leprosy is not much of a factor in our daily lives. But the story is relevant, because we all know our share of people who are "lepers" in the figurative sense. "Untouchables" are no less a problem to us than they were to the people in Jesus' day. There are people whom we may regard as "unclean," if for other reasons.

THIS FOREIGNER

Who are these people? They are the people we regard and treat as outcasts. Because they are old, because they are handicapped in some way, because they are strange to us, we pass by on the other side, if we can. Yet, in the story, Jesus showed that the persons most respondent to God's grace are not those who are seemingly beyond reproach, but the social lepers and religious samaritans who demonstrate in some way that they are closer to Christ than we are.

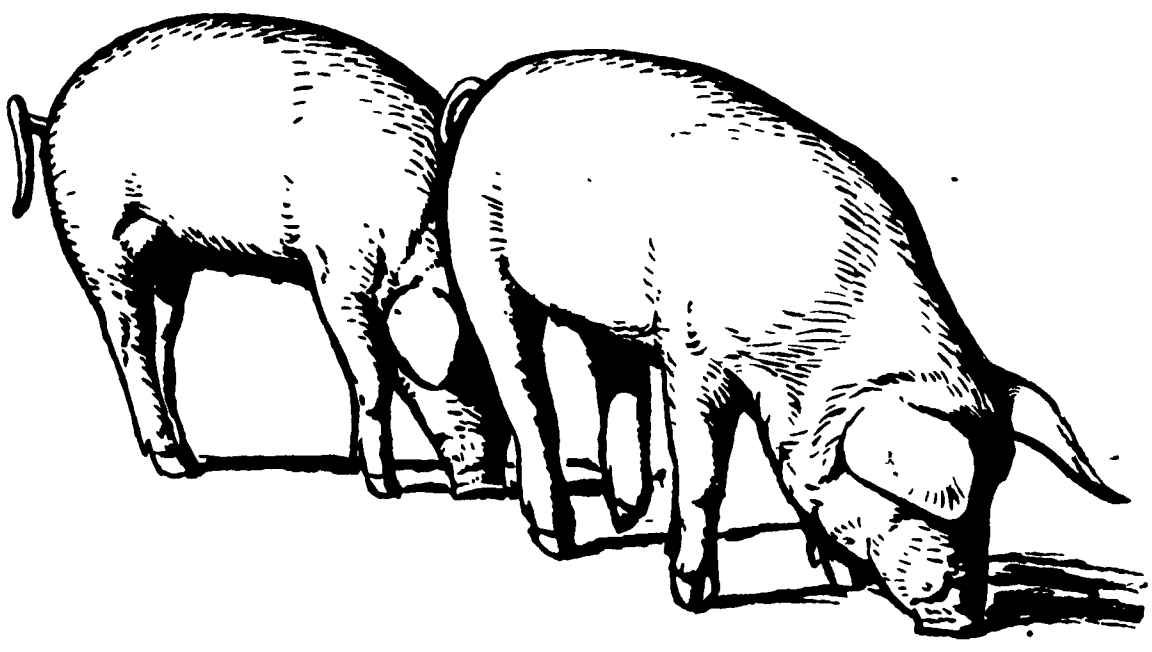
ELIMINATE Early-Weaning Weight Loss Syndrome



Early-weaned pigs normally lose weight during the first week on dry feed. Keep your pigs growing and gaining up to a pound a week with Agway PRO:LEAN EARLY WEAN SUPREME™.

AN EXCELLENT FEED MADE BETTER

Cooperative research farm trials with nearly 1,000 three-week-old weaned pigs showed an increased average daily weight gain of 28.3% over the best, previously developed, Cooperative Research Farm starter ration for early weaned pigs. Average daily feed consumption was up 9.3%, and feed efficiency improved by 14.9% in the first 14 days in the nursery.

EARLY WEAN SUPREME is a highly palatable feed made with high levels of milk nutrients. It is also medicated to control scours. It assures an improved rate of weight gain and feed efficiency in early-weaned pigs.

Ask your Agway Salesperson or your local Agway store for PRO:LEAN EARLY WEAN SUPREME and give your early-weaned pigs a fast start on dry feed.

Life On The Oldest Lancaster County Bicentennial Farm

BY LOU ANN GOOD

EAST EARL (Lancaster) — Harold and Elizabeth Zimmerman consider themselves lucky.

Not only do they own the family farm that has been passed down through seven generations but also they have the distinction of owning one of the two oldest bicentennial farms in Lancaster County. Their farm dates back 261 years to 1715 when three brothers, Henry, George and Jacob Weber, who sailed from Germany to Pennsylvania settled in the Weaverland Valley, 18 miles east of Lancaster.

The brothers homesteaded 3,000 acres. George, Zimmerman's ancester line, eventually claimed 300-acres that was divided over the years until the homestead is now 40 acres.

Two generations after the brothers' arrival in Pennsylvania, they adopted the English spelling "Weaver" for their name. Today, the three brothers' gravesites are marked in a field behind the homestead. It's the oldest gravesite known in the county.

The heritage of farming was passed on to their children and their children's children. At one point, the land was divided among five siblings. The daughter, who was Harold's grandmother, married a Zimmerman and hence the family farm name was changed. Zimmerman recalls his grandmother was one feisty lady.

He said, "She smoked a pipe and a cigar. When the teamsters came to pick produce at the farm and take it to Philadelphia, she wasn't afraid of them." The teamsters had a rough reputation. It's rumored that when they tried to turn around their wagons pulled by eight mules in the driveway, "they could only make the turn if they were drunk. If they weren't drunk, they couldn't make it."

Somewhere during the seven generations since the original settlement, the oldest farmhouse was sold to someone outside the family, but the Zimmermans own one that is 150-year-old.

"It doesn't have as much character as the original home," Elizabeth remarked. Regardless, the home still boasts such amenities as a walk-in fireplace with bread oven and plank floors.

The Zimmermans are restoring and remodeling much of the downstairs.

Harold, who always showed a perchance for farming, stuck with his dad for 26 years and in 1987, after his parent's death, he acquired the homestead. "I paid for it," he said, "because other family members were involved."

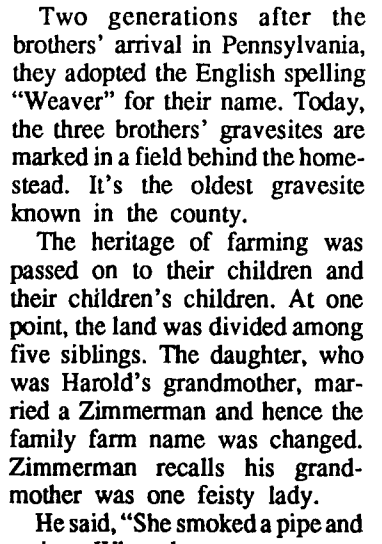
Nor did he inherit the prize herd that he has built up over the years. His 55 Holsteins have a herd average of 20,948 with 740 pounds of butterfat.

"I'm proud of that," he said. "I've been working on increasing the herd average every since I bought my first cow when I was 16."

He credits the improvement to artificial breeding using better bulls, which he chooses himself. He added, "I raised every cow I have. Most are registered. You get out what you put in it."

He points out that it doesn't cost much more to feed a cow that milks 100 pounds rather than 60." He said. "The nice thing about dairy farming is that cows are around a long time and you can see how you improve them."

Harold and Elizabeth Zimmerman consider themselves lucky to live on one of the two oldest farms in Lancaster County. Shown with them are their two children, Eric, 9; and Scott, 4.



Son Eric finds an after-school snack in the Zimmerman's newly remodeled kitchen.

Country Crafts is a growing business for the Zimmermans who started it by making wooden items. The rocking horse is patterned after one that Harold used as a child.

Presently the Zimmermans are uncovering a walk-in fireplace with a bread oven in their 150-year-old farmhouse. Standing in front of the fireplace, the Zimmermans examine the iron on which the copper cooking kettle hung.

Elizabeth, better known as B J., feeds the calves and cows while her husband milks. "I like all animals," she said. She's proud of her eight cats, which she emphatically claims are not scruffy.

But more than cats and cows occupy her time. B.J. has a shop called Country Crafts on the premise.

It was birthed seven years ago when they tore down an old tobacco shed and started making furniture out of the wood. They put the deacons benches, jelly cupboards and bench tables in their yard bordered by well-traveled Route 897, one mile off Route 23.

In 1985 B.J. got the idea to have a Christmas Barn show. She contacted friends who helped make crafts. They depended upon free advertising to bring buyers to the two week show. Visitors responded to the crafts placed upon stacked hay bales and pictures hung on the wooden planks, with comments such as "It's fantastic. It's unbelievable."

The Christman Barn Show with 21 exhibitors is now held traditionally for two weeks in November. But year-around, B.J. operates her on the farm gift shop from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Hershberger Named Winner In Ag Spokesperson Contest

BY LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER — Although a dairy farmer and a pullet grower, the new Agriculture Spokesperson representing Pennsylvania admits he's a "ham."

Douglas Hershberger who impressed the judges during the spokesman contest is no amateur to public appearances. The 26-year-old Quarryville farmer developed his speaking skills through FFA, speaking courses and appearances before churches and groups.

Hershberger said, "I welcome opportunities to speak, not just to farm groups but consumers."

To win the state title, Hershberger had to appear before three judges at the state Pennsylvania Young Farmers Convention held at at the Willow Valley Conference Center, Lancaster, on Wednesday and Thursday.

He, along with four other contestants, gave a five-minute speech on agriculturally related subjects. They were then questioned by the judges on a wide variety of subjects pertaining to agriculture. They were judged 33 percent on their speeches and 67 percent on the responses to the impromtu questioning.

Hershberger, who is single, gave a humorous speech on "How to get the most from your food dollars." His shopping spree began in a supermarket where he ran into four kids with grocery carts reving their engines as if preparing for the Acme 500.

Finding congestion at the meat counter and in several aisles, Hershberger suggests we should have "aisle traffic controllers who work much like air traffic controllers."

He said, "I can hear it now, over the loud speaker: Attention Shoppers, we have a tie up in aisle 13, a group of children making huge quantities of cookie and candy purchases."

Though impatient with the coupon shopper before him, he is notably impressed that she managed to pay $83.75 for $123 of groceries. "What a savings!" he exclaims. "That's better then standing in the Penney's line during during Washington's birthday sale.

Hershberger, a graduate of Penn State with a degree in agricultural science, will compete on the national level at Columbus, Ohio, in December during the annual National Young Farmer Educational Institute.

In addition to his farming operation, Hershberger has taken on a job as an agent for Prudential Financial Services. On September 9, he plans to marry Jolletta Esbenshade, Manheim.

The four other contestants were well qualified and according to judges, "Each of them would be capable of doing a good job as the spokesperson."

Receiving plaques for their participation were Duane Hershey, Cochranville and Octorara PYF, who spoke on stewardship of the land. Nord Parkinson expounded on farm exports benefiting urban consumers. Faye Cauffman, Millerstown, and a PYF of the Greenwood chapter, spoke on Biotechnology the new frontier. Henry Zerby, Beavertown and PYF West Snyder chapter, spoke on the same topic but presented a different slant.

All contestants participated in a media blitz at the Willow Valley Farmers Market on Thursday.

The contest is in it's 13th year. According to Phoebe Bitler, Fleetwood, coordinator and future national winner of the event, "The purpose of the contest is to encourage young agriculturalists to develop articulate responses to urban consumers' concerns and to provide opportunities for them to educate the news media and consumers."

Judges for the event included Ken Meck, hog and beef farmer; Roger Rohrer, Hamilton Bank loan officer; and Lou Ann Good, staff writer for Lancaster Farming.

Contestants in the Young Farmer Spokesman contest included (left to right): Henry Zerbe, Nord Parkinson, Faye Cauffman, Duane Hershey, and Douglas Hershberger, the state representative to national competition. The contest was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Farm Credit Association.

PYF Names

According to Calvin Fisher, spokesman for the chapter, they increased membership from 44 last year to 72 this year by "talking enthusiastically to people about PYF."

Manheim PYF holds the spotlight as the biggest chapter in the state. "Twelve years ago we had 19 members and now we have 176," Don Wenger, chapter president said.

Earl Geib, officer in the Manheim chapter explained, "The secret to increasing membership is getting them when they are young—right out of high school. They see the purpose for coming and they want to keep coming."

Ephrata PYF boasted the largest chapter representation at the state convention. Paul and Brenda Zimmerman of Ephrata accepted the award for their chapter.

John and Stella Schwartz, Gettysburg, were granted honorary membership for their commitment to hosting the executive breafast for many years and "for helping us get whatever we need."

Frederic Bohn is the new president elect for the state organization. Other new officers include: Ed Zug, region vice president; Ruby Bollinger, secretary; Henry Zerby III, vice president; Chris Harvey, public relations; Robert Tercha VII, vice president; Terry Womer, treasurer; and Henry Sauders, president elect.

(Turn to Page A37)

Regional winners for the outstanding young farmers under 30 included: (left to right) Timothy and Denise Wetzel, Snyder; Ken Sanner, Kutztown; Brian and Angie Platt, Berlin Brothers Valley.

Ruby Bollinger (left) presents the state's outstanding community award to Nevin and Isabel Zerby, West Snyder. Their devotion to working with youth in 4-H, FFA and church earned them the award.

Director Of State Farmland Preservation Named

HERSHEY — Secretary of Agriculture Boyd E. Wolff announced today that a woman who gave new direction to a floundering farmland preservation program in Connecticut will head Pennsylvania's new farmland protection effort.

Mary E. Goodhouse has been named director of the Bureau of Farmland Protection within the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. She will oversee the Commonwealth's $100 million program to protect farmland through purchases of development rights.

"Mary Goodhouse has extensive experience in this type of farmland protection," said Wolff, "and she will apply her talents in our state at a time when the disappearance of farmland has alarmed producers and consumers alike.

"When she took over the Connecticut program in 1983, it gained new direction and new momentum. Her efforts have also protected vanishing farmland in Vermont and Maine."

Wolff made the announcement during an address to the Council of Farm Organizations, meeting in Hershey.

Goodhouse has worked in cooperation with the American Farmland Trust in promoting farmland preservation programs throughout the Northeast. In 1988, she chaired a regional meeting of farmland preservation professionals sponsored by the American Farmland Trust, at Coventryville, Pennsylvania.

Goodhouse, who has been Program Director of Farmland Preservation in Connecticut, co-authored and published Town Farmland Protection, a manual that is used by local conservation commissions and local land trusts to preserve farmland at the local level. She will assume her new responsibilities in Pennsylvania on March 6, 1989.

Cornucopia Honors

only several weeks after he won the 1988 fall election, he has already set in motion some of his campaign promises for reforms in the state's response to drugs. His goal is to have legislation introduced this month that will give big dealers long sentences, manditory death for drug dealers who murder innocent citizens, and heavier penalties for social use of drugs.

In addition, Preate wants to expand municipal drug task forces and reorganize and streamline the Bureau of Narcotics.

At the Cornucopia are, (l to r): Council President Charles Benner, Rep. Kenneth Brandt, Sen. Patrick Stapleton, Sen. Edward Helfrick and Kathy Gill, master of ceremonies.

The Cornucopia each year features the presentation of a gift basket of Pennsylvania-produced foods for legislators in attendance. This year 70 legislators were present to honor the state food and farming industry and receive samples of food. Sponsored by the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations, the Cornucopia drew 500 diners to focus attention on the importance of Agriculture and Agri-business in the Commonwealth. President Charles Benner said it was the largest crowd to attend the eight year annual event.

Boyd Wolff, state ag secretary, urged legislators and citizens to get behind the state tax reform that will likely come up for a referendum vote in the spring. Wolff said this is an opportunity for everyone to share the burden of local taxes that presently fall more heavily on farm property owners.

In addition, Wolff announced that Mary E. Goodhouse has been named director of the Bureau of Farmland Protection within the PDA. Goodhouse will oversee the Commonwealth's $100 million program to protect farmland through purchases of development rights. The new director comes to Pennsylvania after a successful effort in Connecticut's farmland preservation program.

Trotacre Farm

add a purchased protein mix. They stress the importance of a balanced feeding program. They currently participate in the Penn State feeding program but formerly used a highly successful feeding program designed by their local feed mill representative. Their milk goes to Taylors, mostly for Grade A milk, with some to cheese because of high protein from the Guernsey.

The high Holstein, Abbekerk, is jointly owned by Trotacres Farms and Roger Pertl of Slippery Rock. Pertl was raised on a small dairy farm in Erie County and met Dave Trotter at Penn State where they both earned degrees in Dairy Production. The two were fraternity brothers and bought the outstanding Holstein in 1984 at the First Nittany Lion Fall Classic for a bid of $2,100. She was milking 50 and 2 months from going dry. She scored 86 then and 89 now. In 1988, her record was 305 days, 39,067 milk, 4.5% fat, 1,754 and 2.9% protein.

Dolly Run FB Jay, top Guernsey milk producer for 1988, is approximately 12 years old. She scored excellent twice, once at 92. Her record at age 10 concluded with 305 days, 26,173 milk and 3.8% fat, 1,000 and 3.0% protein. Jim bought her as a 2-year-old bred heifer from Dolly Run in Centerville. She has had 3 records over 20,000. She is also a National Class Leader in the American Guernsey Association, 4th in milk and 4th in protein with 150,000 lifetime and 5,500 lbs. fat.

All of the Trotters, three families representing four generations, pitch in and contribute to the success of the family operation and together celebrate their success. Grandma Trotter helps out with the care of the youngest Trotters; her son, Jim, is the "overseer" and business manager of the operation. Jim's wife, Mary Lou, and their daughters, serve as "back-up crew" and temporary help for special activities. Son, Dave, Milk Sanitation Inspector in Western PA for the PA Department of Agriculture, takes care of Registration and DHIA records. Jim and another son, Bob, do the field work. The Trotters are assisted by John Ratron and Loretta Boren who have been dedicated workers at Trotters for over 5 years.

The Trotter family is involved in many community and farm organizations. They show cattle at local fairs and in Ohio. Debbie and Dave's wife Jill were both Dairy Princesses for Beaver/Lawrence counties.

Extension Of Drought Relief Order Gives Dairymen Brighter 1989

BY KARL BERGER
Special Correspondent

The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board has given another boost to the over-order pricing efforts of area dairymen.

In a unanimous decision announced Feb. 2, the board's three members — J. Robert Derry, Leon Wilkinson and Paul O'Hop — extended PMMB's current $1.05 a hundredweight drought relief order on Class I milk through Aug. 31. The special order, which functions as a kind of premium tacked onto the various federal order or PMMB minimum farm prices in the state, was due to expire Feb. 28.

The decision followed a hearing in Harrisburg Jan. 30 at which representatives from a number of farm groups testified to the continued need for higher milk prices in the wake of last summer's drought and the higher feed costs it has imposed. More than 15 witnesses representing producers, processors and consumers testified, according to Tom Kugel, a spokesman for the board.

The extension helps to insure that dairymen in Pennsylvania and neighboring states will have higher prices this year than they did in 1988, according to Jim Fraher, an economist for Atlantic Dairy Cooperative. Fraher, who argued for the extension at the hearing, said a combination of over-order premiums and balanced markets locally and across the nation will boost producer income this year.

Although it operates statewide, the marketing board has limited authority to impose farm milk price increases; its $1.05 order probably applies to less than 20 percent of the state's milk supply, according to industry observers. Nevertheless, the action facilitates parallel efforts by dairy farmer groups such as the Middle Atlantic Cooperative Milk Marketing Agency in Federal Order 4 and the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency in Order 2.

MACMMA, which is supported by the Middle Atlantic Order's three major cooperatives, has charged raw milk buyers the same $1.05 premium since the PMMB order went into effect last September. RCMA has had a 75-cent premium in effect during this period. Both premium levels are expected to continue in the wake of the PMMB extension.

Local milk prices also have gotten a big boost from the higher prices for milk paid by manufacturing plants in the upper Midwest last fall, a reflection of tight markets there. The Minnesota-Wisconsin price series, a measure of these prices used by the government to set prices in the federal order system nationwide, rose $1.94 from June through December before declining 37 cents last month, to $11.90 a hundredweight.

Analysts expect the M-W will continue to decline, as it usually does, through the spring flush. But a temporary 50-cent rise in the government's support price from April through June will keep prices from falling as low as they otherwise would have. Fraher, for instance, predicts the M-W will bottom out at $10.80 this spring, almost 50 cents above its level in the spring of 1988.

Moreover, supply-demand conditions should continue to favor dairymen. U.S. Department of Agriculture analysts, in their latest outlook report on the dairy industry, predict tighter conditions this year than last year as consumption gains keep pace with any increase in production.

The upshot is higher prices for area dairymen. Fraher predicts producers regulated under orders 2 and 4 will see their blend prices average above 30 cents a hundredweight more in 1989 than in 1988.

The PMMB effects its order through higher minimum farm milk prices in all six of its marketing areas statewide. However, its direct impact on farmers' wallets is mitigated by several factors.

For one thing, the order applies only to Class I milk for fluid use. For another, the marketing board does not have the authority to regulate the price out-of-state dealers pay for their milk, even if it comes from Pennsylvania, nor the price instate dealers pay for out-of-state milk, according to Reid Miller, a PMMB official.

In southeastern Pennsylvania, where MACMMA controls more than 90 percent of the raw milk supply, these distinctions are academic; the $1.05 has become a standard in the marketplace, Miller said. The same uniformity does not apply, however, to central and northern parts of the state where RCMA operates. Here producers face "a mixed bag" of premiums from a variety of sources, Miller said.

Mercer County Schedules Corn Day

MERCER — The Mercer County extension office is sponsoring an educational program on corn on Friday, February 17. Co-sponsors for the one-day program are Mercer County seed and fertilizer dealers.

The day's activities begin at 10:00 a.m. at the Mercer County Vo-Tech School with Dr. George Greaser's discussion on income planning. Following the Penn State extension agronomist will be another Penn State expert: entomologist Dr. Dennis Calvin, who will speak on recognizing and controlling crop insect pests.

Just prior to lunch the Pennsylvania five-acre corn club awards will be presented. Dr. Douglas Beegle, John Yocum, and William Fleet of Pioneer, will round out the workshop.

Two pesticide update training credits in category 01 have been assigned to the event. Farmers should be sure to bring their pesticide license with them.

For more information, contact Ken Maxwell, 662-3141.

Berks Dairy Day

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Berks Co. Correspondent

LEESPORT (Berks) — Over 100 dairymen and agribusiness people attended Berks County's annual Dairy Day last week for a day of education and discussion on increasing production through minimizing forage loss, utilizing new building technology, and maximizing cow comfort. Hosted by the Berks County Extension Service, the program was held at the Berks County Ag Center, Leesport. Penn State specialists were on hand for discussions and agribusiness exhibits were displayed.

"Pennsylvania dairy farmers lose more income from hot weather problems than from cold weather," stated Dr. Robert Graves, Penn State Extension Agricultural Engineer, as he emphasized keeping cows cool in hot weather. Decreased appetite and inadequate water account for substantially lowered milk production, Dr. Graves pointed out. He listed the basic approach to hot weather cow management as:

1. Keep cows out of the hot midday sun.
2. Maximize air movement around the cows.
3. Provide adequate air exchange to remove foul air from barns.
4. Provide plenty of fresh cool drinking water. Use extra tubs if needed.

Dr. Graves stressed adequate air flow. "Air movement and air exchange are necessary to help your animals remove body heat," he continued. In his presentation to the dairymen, Dr. Graves included handouts with his recommendations for adequate ventilation. For free stall barns, his recommendations are:

1. Building should be as open as possible - a "sun shade."
2. Minimum clear ridge opening 2 in./10 ft. of building width, more if cover is used.
3. Sidewalls open at cow level, complete removal if possible.
4. Minimum sidewall height 10-12 ft., (minimum distance from a standing cow's head to the roof should be 6 feet.)
5. Unobstructed location, exposed to summer breezes.
6. Minimize interior obstructions when possible. Use open free stall fronts, no feed bunks.
7. Reflective roofing or bird proof insulation
8. Few if any skylights.
9. Avoid wide, low pitched buildings.

Dr. Graves continued by discussing sprinkler systems in dairy barns. "Farmers using water sprinklers at feed bunks to improve cow comfort in hot weather and maintain feed intake continue to report good results," he stated. However, Dr. Graves did comment that usually when sprinklers were mentioned, mastitis was the first thing that came to mind, not increased milk production. When properly managed, preferably with a timer, or the dairyman carefully regulating the wetting intervals, excess water would drip off the flanks, not udder, and the remainder is dried by air movement in the area, according to Dr. Graves. He cautioned against wetting any bedding areas and also cautioned against wetting cows in an enclosed area or one with little air exchange. This would result in a steam bath effect and lower milk production further. "Alternate wetting and drying may actually increase the cooling effect," he concluded.

Dr. Graves' presentation was followed by a panel discussion on "Changing facilities for Cow Comfort" and included slides from the Wilbur Hershey farm and Harold Myer farm. This also incorporated the presentation earlier in the day by Pat Richie, Penn State Extension Agent, Agricultural Engineer, on "New Building Technology and Concrete Considerations." Richie took farmers on a step by step worksheet to determine adequate concrete needs on the farm.

Rounding out the program was Dr. Alan Rotz, agricultural engineer, USDA Forage Research Center, who gave presentations on "Forage Losses During Harvesting and Storage and the Effect on the Dairy Animal," and "New Technology and Alternate Management Strategies in Forage Production For the 1990 Dairy Farm." Bruce Kreider, Penn State Extension Agent, also addressed the dairymen with his topic, "Crisis in the Labor Force."

PDA Gets Additional Funding

HARRISBURG — Governor Robert P. Casey's proposed state budget provides substantial new support for food safety and for promotion of Pennsylvania products, according to state Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff.

"This budget is clearly aimed at promoting the sale of our state's farm products," said Wolff. "It also shows we want to expand food inspections to protect consumers and producers.

"People who buy our products do so with confidence that they are buying quality and freshness. We want to conduct more food inspections to underscore that confidence."

Wolff pointed out the new spending plan adds $200,000 for a program to test laying flocks for Salmonella Enteritidis.

The budget also would add $250,000 for increased food inspections. The Department of Agriculture inspects licensed food stores, processing plants, warehouses, transportation facilities, bakeries, bottling plants, nurseries, seed dealers and certain restaurants and concession stands.

"Marketing efforts will also get a boost through a $190,000 increase for Agricultural Promotion," said Wolff, "and nearly half of that will promote international trade efforts and fund the small business link with foreign clients."

Crawford County Plans Corn, Forage Day

MEADVILLE (Crawford) — Plans are completed for the 25th Annual Crawford County Corn and Forage Day, which will be held on Thursday, February 16, 1989, at the Meadville Days Inn, starting at 9:30 a.m. with the trade show. The speaking portion will start at 10:30 a.m. with George Greaser, Penn State Extension Farm Management Specialist, discussing "How to Improve Farm Income." Also in the morning, Crawford County Agent Joseph Beard's topic will be "Pennsylvania Pesticide Law Update and Pesticide Safety." This program will qualify for one credit in Core for pesticide update training for persons who hold pesticide permits.

A buffet lunch will be provided by the 30 participating feed, seed, fertilizer and chemical representatives who also have educational exhibits for the trade show. Farmers attending the program will have an opportunity to visit with the industry representatives and discuss their concerns.

The afternoon session will consist of three speakers whose presentations will qualify for three credits in Category 01 for pesticide update training. The speakers are as follows: Douglas Beegle, Penn State Extension Agronomist, talking about the "Penn State New Nitrogen Test and Nutrient Management"; "Soybean Production and Weed Control" will be discussed by John Yocum, Manager of Penn State Landisville Experiment Station; and Dennis Calvin, Penn State Extension Entomologist, will present information on "Insect Problems Observed in 1988 and How to Prevent the Problems in 1989."

For those persons attending the session a $3 registration fee is required to offset the expenses of the program. This fee will be collected with a registration card as people go through the buffet.

The Meadville Medical Center will have a free health screening program throughout the day in conjunction with the Corn and Forage Day Program. Such things as blood pressure, eyes, weight, hearing, etc. will be checked by trained personnel.

The 25th Annual Crawford County Corn and Forage Day program provides an educational opportunity to update information on agriculture, receive pesticide training credits and have a health screening, visit with industry representatives and other farmers all in the same day.

Please call the Extension Office (814)/336-1151, ext. 260 or 800/982-9019 for reservations in order to assist us in making proper arrangements.

State House Bill Authorizes Ag Processor Loans

HARRISBURG — The House of Representatives of Pennsylvania passed on Tuesday a bill authorizing low interest loans to agriculture processors according to John H. Broujos (D-199).

"It is high time we help our state's number one industry, which is suffering from a number of problems, including drought and imports," Broujos said.

H.B. 110, sponsored by Representative Samuel Morris (D-Chester County) and co-sponsored by Representatives Ken Brandt (R-98, Lancaster), Broujos (D-199, York, Adams, Cumberland), Kenneth Cole (D-91, Adams), John E. Barley (R-100, Lancaster) provides for loans to improve the production and export capability of food processors.

There are over 1200 food processors in Pennsylvania, with approximately 80,000 employees, in 1986. This figure is down from 86,800 employees in 1982.

Agricultural processors will now be able to get low interest loans, ranging from 5% to the prime rate. They are eligible for up to $100,000 or 50% of the total project cost. If eligible under another program, such as exports, the processor may receive up to $200,000.

Broujos said the bill will make our food processing industry more competitive on the international market and more productive through upgrade of technology and equipment.

The Capital Loan Fund program is already in existence under a 1984 act, as part of the Economic Revitalization Program of the 1983-84 session.

This act has been successful in making a large number of loans to small businesses.

Maryland Ag Breakfast Date Changed

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Agriculture Week president Patricia Langenfelder has announced a change of date for the traditional "Maryland Agriculture Dinner", which honors the Governor and members of the General Assembly. The event will be held on Wednesday, March 15 at Martin's West in Baltimore County. In past years the event had always been held in early February.

"We changed the date this year so Maryland could more closely have the event in conjunction with National Agriculture Week observances," Langenfelder said.

"There are a few sponsor openings left at this time for those firms and individuals who would like to join with us in this opportunity to promote agriculture and agribusiness in Maryland. Anyone wishing information on sponsorship should contact Robert Blades, dinner treasurer, at 301/754-8184," she concluded.

Lancaster Extension

Lancaster County 4-H'ers had a successful year with the dairy bowl team placing first in state competition as well as the Pennsylvania Dairy Bowl contest and second in the national 4-H contest. The meats judging team did well too, placing first in the state competition and among the top five in the nation. The Red Rose Baby Beef Club stepped into the spotlight at Farm Show, sweeping the top spots in each market steer weight division and claiming the grand and reserve grand championship utles.

The extension expanded and diversified its services in 1988 with the addition of several new county agents. Horticulturist H. Bruce Hellerick joined the staff in spring as a did multi-county poultry specialist Dr. John H. Schwartz. Later additions in the year were multi-county housing specialist Dr. Robert J. Thee and multi-county farm-management specialist Alan Strock.

Dairy specialist Glenn A. Shirk received a distinguished service award Thursday night from the Pennsylvania Association of Agricultural Agents for his work in Lancaster County. He also received recognition from the national organization earlier in the year.

Through the county's Chesapeake Bay project, 48 farm nutrient-management plans have been developed. In addition, as a result of demonstration plots, conferences, and tours on composting and marketing ideas, 10,350 tons of excess manure have been marketed out of the county.

Nutrient-management plans were developed on 94 farms in the Upper Conestoga Watershed as a result of the Rural Clean Water Project. The fertilizer reduction from these plans means a savings of more than $91,000 for the participating farmers.

Three new directors were selected to the extension's board. They are Joyce Graybill, northwest; Larry High, northeast; and Dottie Charles, southwest. In addition Helen Rohrer was re-elected to represent the southeast region while Ed L. Zug will represent the southern region for another term.

The county's Expanded Foods and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP) added two graduate homemakers to help low-income families learn about nutrition. EFNEP celebrates 20- years of serving Lancaster County in 1989.

Child Labor Laws

Is Your Minor Working Legally?

BY LISA RISSER

KENNETT SQUARE (Chester) — "More than half of the serious injuries to children that I see are to relatives of business owners," Joe McKeefrey told farmers. "Children are more likely to get hurt if their parents own the business because not many employees are going to tell the owner's child not to do something."

McKeefrey addressed attendees at the Conference For Employers of Farm Labor this week, discussing child labor laws and the federal Migrand and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act. McKeefrey, compliance officer with the U.S. Department of Labor, Wage and Hour Division (DOL), noted "because kids are more likely to get hurt, there are child labor laws. Kids have more of a tendency to do stupid things and get hurt than older people."

Farmers who plan on hiring youth under 16 years of age should contact their local DOL office for information on child labor laws. "We don't expect farmers or any businessman to have these laws memorized," McKeefrey stressed. "But they should give us a call and see if what they plan to have that minor doing is legal."

When considering minor workers, farmers should call their insurance company as well because some will not provide coverage on under-age employees.

Child labor laws are broken down by age and are geared to farm work and non-farm work. Any youth older than 16 years may work on a farm at any time and at any job. Youths 14 or 15 years old may work outside of school on farm jobs not declared hazardous by the Secretary of Labor. Children 12 or 13 years old may work outside of school on farm jobs not declared hazardous with the written parental consent or if their parents work on that farm. Children under 12 years of age may not work on farms employing workers covered by the minimum wage provisions. On all other farms, they may work in nonhazardous jobs outside school hours with written parental consent.

For children 10 to 11 years old, they may work at hand harvesting jobs of short-season crops outside of school hours for no more than eight weeks between June 1 and October 15 if their employers have special waivers from the Secretary of Labor.

In addition, youth of any age may work at any time on any farm job if their parents own or operate the farm. "But I would recommend against it," McKeefrey stated. "I've seen too many serious injuries on children. I know what I'm talking about because I was raised on a horse farm and my father wouldn't let me do many things while I was young. I still have all my fingers and some of my neighbors don't. Kids aren't as careful as adults."

There are many farm activities that are considered hazardous. Some of them include operating a tractor over 22 PTO, connecting or disconnecting implements from the tractor, operating many field implements such as grain harvestors or hay mowers, operating earth movers, being in a pen or yard with a bull, boar, stud horse, sow suckling piglets, or cow with calf, and using a ladder or scaffold higher than 20 feet. More specific information can be obtained at DOL.

There are some exemptions from the prohibitions on hazardous jobs, farmers should contact DOL for details.

The requirements for youths working on non-farm jobs are more stringent and there are hazardous jobs limiting 16 and 17 year olds. In addition, there is a limit on the number of hours children under 16 years are allowed to work.

Violations of child labor laws mean a $1,000 fine in addition to remorse for the accident. Employers also could be in line for a law suit from the injured child's parents.

There are many jobs on a farm that children can perform and perform in safety. It is up to the farmer to find out which they can do.

Pennsylvania Corn Tests Free Of Aflatoxin

HARRISBURG — State Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff said that testing has shown Pennsylvania-grown corn was virtually free of aflatoxin, a mold that attacks corn and is a danger primarily to livestock.

"The testing results indicate that corn grown in Pennsylvania is safe for human and livestock consumption," Wolff said. "The level of aflatoxin appears no higher than what might be expected in a normal year."

The State Agriculture Department ordered the tests last fall after high levels of aflatoxin were detected in corn grown in midwestern states. Tests of 126 samples of shelled corn in Pennsylvania uncovered contamination above acceptable levels in only one sample. That corn will not be used.

Aflatoxin, produced by a mold that thrives on drought-stressed plants, is poisonous to cattle in large doses and is suspected of causing liver cancer in humans. In Pennsylvania, aflatoxin would be mainly a danger to livestock, since virtually all of the corn grown in the state is used to feed livestock and is not processed for human consumption.

Wolff said the tests, conducted on corn samples obtained statewide, showed no aflatoxin in 113 instances, less than 20 parts per billion (ppb) in 12 instances; and one sample of 80 ppb. Corn with less than 20 ppb of aflatoxin is not restricted in use.

Stop Rural Crime

BY RANDY WELLS
Indiana Co. Correspondent

MARION CENTER (Indiana) — Although newspapers every day have stories of rising crime in America's cities and suburbs, living in rural Pennsylvania is no guarantee a thief won't strike your farm next.

According to the Pennsylvania Commission on Crime and Delinquency (CCD), rural crime is also on the increase. In fact, Barbara Woodruff, who has been studying rural crime for 1 years as a Community Development Agent with the Penn State Extension Service, said the number of crimes per capita is actually greater in rural areas of the state than in urban centers.

People who live in the country generally may be less security-conscious than their city cousins, according to the CCD.

Pennsylvania State Police Trooper Allen Evans of the Indiana station agrees. "Rural people have lived for so long without any problems, with leaving their equipment out in the fields and without locking up buildngs," he said. "But with crime on the increase everywhere, they're going to have to be more urban in their thinking."

Security lighting is also generally less prevalent than in cities, and much of rural Pennsylvania falls under the protection of Pennsylvania State Police partrols, which have wide areas to cover.

Despite the increase in rural crime, it may be that most of the incidents are property crimes rather than attacks against people. Burglary is at the top of the list.

Here are some tips from the CCD, Ms. Woodruff and Trooper Evans on how to discourage burglars and thieves and beef up security around your farm and home.

Lock up: Since most burglars are looking for easy access, good locks are your best line of defense.

Deadbolt locks on all exterior doors, and double cylinder locks on doors with glass panels and windows, are best.

According to CCD, the locks should have a one-inch throw (the length of the bolt when extended from the door.)

Remember to lock up even during the day when working around the outside of your home. A surprising number of burglaries occur in broad daylight. And don't forget locks for garages, sheds and other outbuildings as well as your house.

Light up: Another major deterrent to burglars is good security lighting. To a certain extent, the relative isolation of many rural homes and farms can be offset by outdoor lighting around houses, garages, sheds and barns.

Lights over driveways and lanes can also help identify who's coming and going. Making your home look occupied - even when it's not! Typically burglars look for homes and other targets of opportunity where no one is at home. Anything you can do to give the impression there are people around will discourage intruders.

While you're away, the CCD suggests leaving some lights on or a radio playing, again, even during the daytime.

If you're going to be away for more than one day, it's a good idea to have a neighbor pick up your mail and newspaper, mow the lawn or plow out the driveway.

And one of the oldest deterrents to burglars is still one of the best: an alert dog which barks at strange noises. To prevent stealing: If at all possible, don't leave equipment and implements out in fields away from buildings and well-lighted areas.

Entire pieces of equipment can be towed away or loaded on trucks, and individual components, such as batteries, can be easily removed. According to Ms. Woodruff, rural thieves have a new favorite item from parked equipment: hydraulic cylinders.

If vehicles or implements must be left in fields, lock them. A method the military has used for decades to secure vehicles is to padlock a chain run through the steering wheel so the vehicle can't be turned.

Such a precaution is especially effective for small vehicles such as lawn tractors, Ms. Woodruff said. Once the front wheels are turned as far as they will go in one direction and the steering wheel is chained, it's nearly impossible to push the tractor onto a truck.

Bicycle locking cables work well also, she said.

The CCD reminds farmers to keep their vehicles locked when not in use. The only thing more frustrating than having some of your equipment stolen is to have the thief haul it away in your own pickup truck.

If you own property away from your main farm, avoid storing grain and equipment there. And don't forget to padlock gas tanks. A free tank of gas is often as tempting as other merchandise, and it takes longer to realize it's missing.

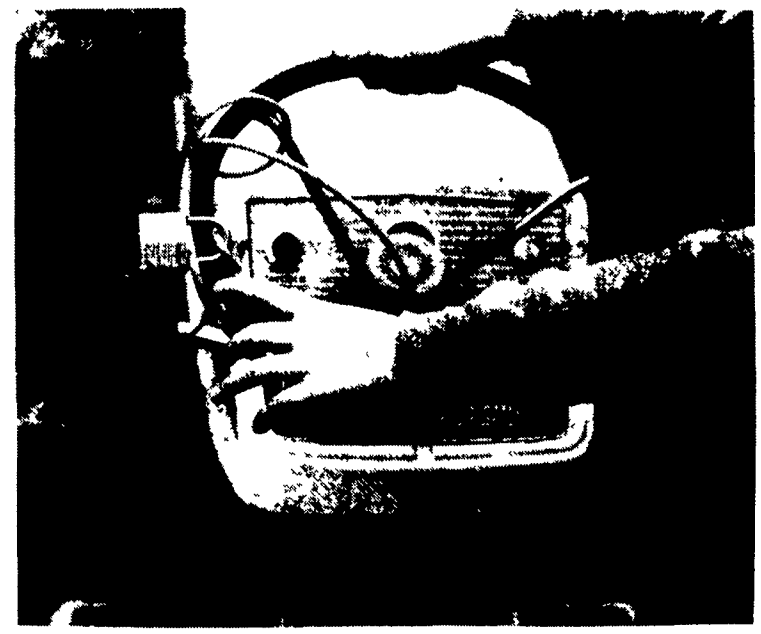
There is a new trend of rural thefts developing: crop thefts. Ms. Woodruff said with the current popularity of woodburning stoves and fireplaces, standing timber and even lumber is often stolen.

Indiana County Christmas tree grower J.D. Fleming estimates his farm loses about 250 Christmas trees to thieves each fall before the holidays. One year his workers discovered about one-half acre of a plantation - about 500 trees - had been dug up and removed, roots and all.

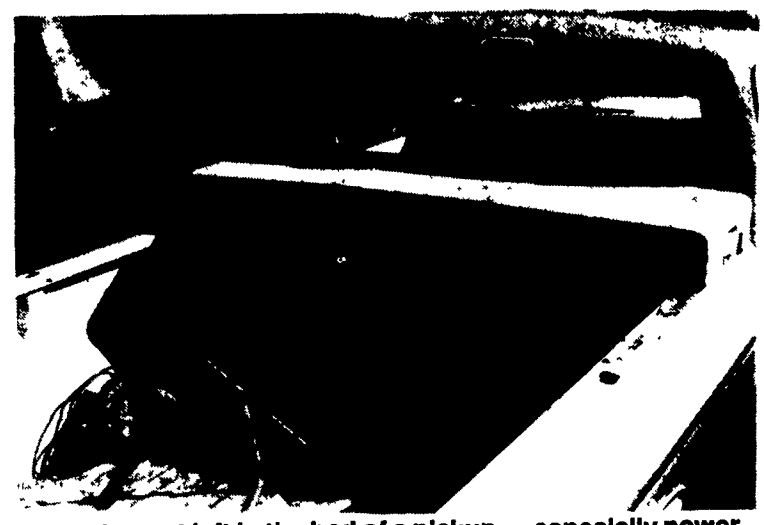
To prevent crop thefts, Mr. Fleming said, it's best to patrol fields as much as possible, limit access roads wherever possible, and encourage neighbors to keep an eye on your fields.

Even if the above steps don't prevent some of your property from being stolen, one other measure may help bring it back home.

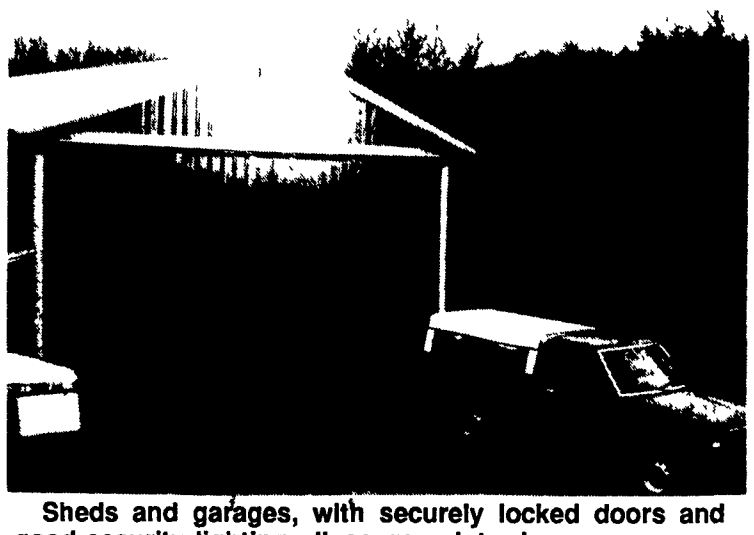
Operation Identification is a problem designed to trace stolen property and return it to its rightful owner. A special engraving tool is used to mark an identifying number in a prominent location on tools and equipment. Ms. Woodruff emphasizes that anyone marking equipment with an engraver should use their Pennsylvania Operators/Drivers License number. Law enforcement agencies nationwide have access to those numbers, she said, and even if a stolen item is recovered in California, it can be traced back to its Pennsylvania owner.



A lawn tractor, with its wheels turned and a bicycle locking cable looped through the steering wheel, is nearly impossible for thieves to push onto a truck.



Equipment left in the bed of a pickup — especially power tools and chain saws — are easy pickings for thieves.



Sheds and garages, with securely locked doors and good security lighting, discourage intruders.

Implements left parked in a field near a rural road are susceptible to theft or vandalism.

Homestead Notes

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

As Valentine's Day approaches, it is again time to set up my antique valentines. Maybe they're not really antiques but they are at least fifty years old. These large, folding cards with red tissue hearts add something to dreary winter days.

And, because a Bible Study group will be held in my home I feel they will be appreciated. The one thing that I have just now on the dining room table and that I appreciate a lot is a beautiful basket of flowers that our youngest daughter sent us for a wedding anniversary gift. Flowers are one of my weaknesses and I love all kinds.

I've been busy sorting snapshots from our Christmas gatherings. My daughters got double prints and gave me theirs too so I have a lot to put in an album. There are even a few from spring and summer trips. In fact there are so many that I intend to mail some to nine of our relatives.

We planned a "Supper for 8" at our home recently and had a big problem getting eight at the table. One couple had a business trip to Virginia come up unexpectedly a few days before our meal. And then two hours before we were ready to be seated at the table, another couple phoned to say the wife felt ill.

But, I was determined to have a "Supper for 8" and so I ask relatives and neighbors at the last minute. We had a very interesting evening as one of the couples are natives of Switzerland. It was a coincidence that the man had lived in the same village in Switzerland as the original owner of our farm. There is even a road sign with the "Weidler" name on it in this village in Europe.

One of these times I am really going to start braiding a rug. One bright blue wool skirt has already been ripped into strips and basted. It simply means that I must make brading a rug before spring planting my first priority.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Though the change seems almost too slow to pinpoint, it's still much too obvious to miss.

Each morning's light is a little brighter, a little sooner. And evening barn chores are well under way before the white glow of the barn's automatic night light bathes the blacktop with a bluish tint.

The darkest days of Winter are history. Already, a sense of urgency tugs, as the minutes of light stretch a bit longer with each passing day.

So, the time is at hand for our annual journey, wandering through the paths and pages of gardening fantasyland. Actually, the first layer in the stack of colorful, wish-book seed catalogs arrived in the mailbox along with a fistful of Christmas cards. All the best stuff might be gone already.

Like the almost limitless "helps" available to enhance the yield for all us backyard tomato producers. Tomato stalks can now have their own cages, towers, racks, collars and jungle-gym netting to lounge over.

Wire cages hold the plants together and neatly erect, keeping the luscious fruits off the ground. Wooden racks are similar, but sturdier, and collapse for storing. Tower-like devices are for holding just the main stalks erect, and letting the rest of the foliage bush out around it.

Nylon netting allows the creative gardener to free-form design some support for straggly tomato vines, like up the side of a house or maybe tent-shaped. Plastic collars have nothing to do with stalk support. Shaped like a square donut, with a hole in the center, the collars are slightly dished and with holes, so water can drip through to the plants.

My single experience with tomato supports entailed three cone-shaped wire devices. By mid-season I was yanking a tangled mass of stems out through the wire, so the sunshine could reach and ripen the tomatoes. After frost, it was evident that the tomatoes greatly outweighed the wire, which was badly bent and misshapen.

Something called a Tomato Boomer also caught my attention. A Boomer is an encapsulated formulation of fertilizer, which can be neatly pushed into the ground to feed the growing plants and, ostensibly, get'em off to a booming start.

Guess our tomatoes will just have to continue making do, sprawling support-less over ground boosted mostly with seasoned cow manure.

Something called Leaky Pipe sounds like an item already hanging around the garden shed. This is garden hose poked full of little holes, so that the water drips through all the perforations and gently soaks into the ground beneath.

And to think, I used part of a roll of duct tape last summer, patching up a "holey" garden hose. Maybe we'll run over it a couple more times with the lawn mower and market it in lengths.

To go with Leaky Pipe, a water computer might be nice. These can be hooked to a watering system and programmed to operate up to six automatic waterings per day for a week. Wonder if it has a backup for thunderstorm power interruptions?

An item labeled a Slug Bar stirs one's curiosity. Molded from plastic, the small rectangular dispenser has a flip-up roof and can be filled with either slug bait or stale beer, which slugs somehow find completely irrestible.

And, not to miss my favorites, the fake, plastic inflatables for scaring off pests. In addition to the usual snakes, owls, and a large "eye" offered by one catalog, is a Scaredy Cat. Styled to resemble a cat's head, complete with large, glittery eyes, the Scaredy Cat is designed to be fastened in a tree. Hang it right up there in the middle of the ripe cherries, where the birds can get a good look - and a good scare.

Finally, if none of this works, take heart. Also offered in one catalog are Pop-Up Flowers, greeting cards in the shape of a cardboard flower pot, complete with colorful blooming bouquets.

No staking, no fertilizing, no mulching, no leaky-hose watering, no slugs.

Gardening gets easier all the time with the right "helps."

Stop Losing Iron

NEWARK, DE — People with an extremely high calcium intake may be diminishing their supply of iron, says University of Delaware Extension nutritionist Dr. Sue Snider.

Current studies at the United States Department of Agriculture Vitamin and Mineral Lab in Beltsville, Md., suggest that a high calcium intake combined with whole grains at mealtime can increase the amount of iron excreted by the body. Researchers concluded that 1,500 mg or more of calcium each day taken with high-fiber meals can reduce the amount of iron available to be absorbed by the body. The recommended daily allowance (RDA) for calcium is 800 mg for adults.

Snider says these findings should be of particular interest to women, who need more iron than men. "Women who consume the RDA of calcium and also eat high-fiber meals shouldn't have a problem with iron absorption. But when experts suggested 1,500 mg of calcium each day to guard against osteoporosis, many women increased their calcium intake with a daily supplement. If they're taking calcium supplement with high-fiber meals, they may be absorbing less iron."

According to Snider, more research needs to be done on the effects of high calcium and whole grains on iron stores in the body. She says that in the meantime, it's better to maintain RDA levels of nutrients like calcium and to get them from a well-balanced diet rather than from supplements. "When you increase nutrients through supplements instead of foods, you're more likely to get things out of balance. You may end up with high levels of some nutrients but decrease the availability of others for use by the body."

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

Make your Valentine a luscious chocolate pie in your microwave with one of today's recipes.

Both recipes are very quick and easy. The first calls for melting chocolate for the filling and making a chocolate crumb crust. In the second, Hershey's Syrup Pie, the chocolate filling is cooked and then poured into a micro-baked pastry crust. Both fillings could be served in dessert dishes as chocolate mousse or pudding, or layered with whipped cream and chocolate cookie crumps in parfait glasses.

Melting chocolate with other ingredients is quick and carefree. "Before microwave," it was either a long slow process in a double boiler or a chancy undertaking with constant stirring in a heavy saucepan on a burner. The only thing to remember with the microwave method is not to overcook. Stop microwaving and stir at the time indicated. Often you'll be able to stir enough to melt the chocolate. If not, continue microwaving and stirring at 30-second intervals until ingredients are melted when stirred.

A crumb crust takes only 1½ to two minutes of microwaving, versus 10 minutes in your conventional oven. Ingredients should be well mixed in; otherwise the more sugary parts can burn. Be careful not to overcook. When done, the Chocolate Crumb Crust (below) has lost it's shiny, wet look in most spots.

The filling for Hershey's Syrup Pie is a thick pudding, so it's perfect for microwaving. Stir well at the times indicated to keep the mixture satiny smooth. Using a wire whisk (which must be removed during cooking) or one of the new microwave plastic whisks (which can be left in during cooking) is ideal.

I've added directions for microwaving a pastry crust. When used with chocolate filling, instead of brushing top edges with vanilla to give a golden brown color, I sprinkle edges with cocoa. After micro-baking, I gently rub the cocoa in to make a smooth baked-look.

Today's recipes are from a new cookbook by Hershey Kitchens, "Simply Chocolate." While the 96-page softcover book is mostly conventional cooking (150 total recipes), 23 recipes give microwave directions. Many of the other recipes could be easily adapted to microwave. Recipes include other fantastic pies, along with tempting cakes, cookies, fudges and desserts. It's a convenient 5½ x8½ -inch size with mouth-watering color photos. For your copy, send either $5.95 or $2.95 with two proofs of purchase (UPC symbols) from Hershey's chocolate chips. Send a check or money order to: Simply Chocolate, Box 8251-D, Ronks, PA 17573. Allow six to eight weeks for delivery.

Chocolate-Marshmallow Mousse Pie

Chocolate Crumb Crust (Below)
1 bar (8 ounces) milk chocolate bar
1½ cups miniature marshmallows
⅓ cup milk
1 cup chilled whipped cream

Prepare Chocolate Crumb Crust (below) and cool completely or use 8-inch (6 ounces) packaged chocolate-flavored crumb crust.

Break chocolate bar into pieces; place in microwave-safe medium bowl with marshmallows and milk. Microwave (High) 1 to 1½ minutes, stirring after 45 seconds, just until mixture is melted and smooth when stirred; cool to room temperature. In small mixer bowl beat cream until stiff, fold into cooled chocolate mixture. Pour into cooled crust. Cover; chill until firm, about 2 to 3 hours. Garnish as desired. Makes 8 servings.

Hint: If desired, substitute 1⅓ cups milk chocolate chips for chocolate candy bar.

Each serving: 497 calories, 6g protein, 32g fat, 49g carbohydrate, 327 mg sodium, 70 mg cholesterol.

Microwave Chocolate Crumb Crust

½ cup butter or margarine
1½ cups graham cracker crumbs
6 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
⅓ cup confectioners' sugar

In microwave-safe small bowl, microwave butter (High) about 1 minute until melted. Stir in graham cracker crumbs, cocoa and confectioners' sugar until well blended. Press on bottom and up sides of microwave-safe 9-inch pie plate. Microwave (High) 1½ to 2 minutes, rotating pie plate after 1 minute. When done, crust is dry and blistered-looking in most spots. (Do not overcook). Cool completely before filling.

Hershey's Syrup Pie

9-inch micro-baked or baked pastry crust (below)
2 egg yolks
⅓ cup cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt (optional)
1¾ cups milk
1 cup Hershey's Syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Syrup Whipped Topping (below)
Fresh fruit

Prepare pastry shell; cool. In microwave-safe medium bowl beat egg yolks. Add cornstarch, salt, milk and syrup; mix until smooth. Microwave on Medium-High (70% power, 450-500 watts) 6 to 8 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes with wire whisk or until mixture is smooth and very thick. Stir in vanilla. Pour into crust. Press plastic wrap directly onto surface; chill several hours or overnight. Garnish with Syrup Whipped Topping and fresh fruit. Makes 8 servings.

Hint: If your microwave does not have Medium-High power, microwave on High (650-700 watts) 5 to 6 minutes, stirring after each 1½ minutes.

Each serving — without topping and fruit: 268 calories, 5g protein, 11g fat, 42g carbohydrate, 191mg sodium, 66 mg cholesterol.

Each serving — with topping: 410 calories, 6g protein, 21g fat, 57g carbohydrate, 211mg sodium, 100mg cholesterol.

Syrup Whipped Topping

1 cup chilled whipping cream
½ cup Hershey's syrup
2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla extract

In small mixer bowl combine chilled whipping cream, Hershey's syrup, confectioners' sugar and vanilla extract. Beat just until cream holds definite shape. (Do not over beat). Makes about 2¼ cups topping.

Pastry Crust

Prepare pastry crust according to favorite recipe and place in microwave-safe pie plate. Prick bottom and sides well with fork. If desired for more color, brush top edges with vanilla. Microwave (High) 3 to 5 minutes, rotating pie plate and watching carefully towards end of cooking. Pastry is done when top looks dry and blistered and feels firm.

Frozen crust: Thaw 1 to 3 minutes on Medium Low or according to package directions. If in foil Pan, remove crust from pan while still frozen by bending pan edges and popping crust out into a microwave-safe pie plate.

Continue as above.

When you purchase your Riteway Model 37, you're buying the potential for an entire heating system. At the time of your original purchase or perhaps later when your needs change, you may add a galvanized steel jacket - allowing you to duct your Model 37 into your central heating system. Riteway's damper motor kit permits you to control the heat output of your jacketed Model 37 by room thermostat A domestic water heater for your Model 37 will increase the already-quick payback on your investment.

You may select the catalytic option at the time you purchase your Model 37, or you may add that option at a later day. You can install your catalytic combustor in 30 seconds - no tools required!

For efficient and versatile wood/coal heating, you'll want the Riteway Model 37

Your family will be warm and comfortable

CAST IRON PARTS: The Model 37 gives you cast iron where it counts - shakeable grate bars (with specially-designed reinforced ribs for coal burning), center bar, flue baffle, easy-to hold grate shaker, brick retainers and draft louvres

RICH SWEET DOUGH NUT ROLL

1 cup lukewarm milk
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 packages yeast
2 eggs
½ cup soft shortening
4½ to 5 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind (optional)

Mix together milk, sugar and salt. Add yeast and stir until yeast is dissolved. Stir in eggs, shortening and rind. Stir in flour until spongy but not sticky.

Knead until smooth and elastic. Place in a greased bowl, turning once to bring greased side up.

Cover with damp cloth and let rise in warm, draft-free spot until doubled in size. Punch down. Let rise again until almost doubled in bulk. Divide into four portions. Roll out one portion on a floured cloth to almost paper thiness.

Walnut Filling:

Mix 4 cups soft butter, 1 cup brown sugar and 2 eggs. Stir in ¼ cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 teaspoon lemon flavoring, and ¼ teaspoon salt. Blend in 4 cups walnuts, finely ground, not chopped.

Spread walnut filling over dough, bring it to edges; starting at right side of oblong, lift cloth and let dough roll up like a jelly roll. Seal well by pinching edges into dough. Continue the same with the other portions.

Place on a greased cookie sheet. Let rise until almost double, about 1 hour. Bake in 325 degree oven for 40 to 45 minutes, until brown.

WHITE CHOCOLATE SOUFFLE WITH RASPBERRY-CHERRY SAUCE

4 egg yolks
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup flour
¾ cup plus 2 tablespoons milk
¼ cup creme de cacao, divided
5 ounces white chocolate, melted
5 egg whites, at room temperature
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
2 tablespoons sugar
Confectioners' sugar

SAUCE:

1 package (10 ounces) frozen raspberries in syrup, thawed and drained
6 tablespoons raspberry preserves
1 tablespoon raspberry liqueur, if desired
⅓ cup chopped sweet cherries, well drained

For souffle, beat egg yolks and 3 tablespoons sugar in small mixer bowl until creamy, about 1 minute. Add flour and beat just until blended. Gradually beat in milk and 2 tablespoons creme de cacao. Transfer yolk mixture to a medium-sized heavy saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens; do not boil. Cool mixture until just warm to touch. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Stir melted chocolate into cooled custard. Beat egg whites and cream of tartar until foamy. Gradually beat in 2 tablespoons sugar; beat until stiff but not dry. Place custard mixture in large mixer bowl. Stir in remaining 2 tablespoons creme de cacao. Gradually, fold in egg whites, ¼ at a time. Pour into buttered and sugared 6-cup souffle dish. Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until puffed and just firm to the touch. Dust with confectioners' sugar.

Meanwhile, for sauce, combine raspberries and preserves in small heavy saucepan. Bring to boiling, stirring constantly; boil 1 minute. Strain to eliminate seeds. Stir in liqueur and cherries. Let stand at room temperature until souffle is baked. Spoon over each serving.

Featured Recipe

Low Cholesterol cooking was featured in the "Home On The Range" column last week. Vegetable lasagna was pictured but the recipe was inadvertedly missed. For those who were thrilled to discover that lasagna need not be off-limits, but disappointed the recipe was not included, it is featured this week.

The recipe comes from San Souci, an Ohio health spa that offers a 1,000 calorie per day weight-loss cuisine. Said owner Susanne Kircher, a registered nurse and former nutrition consultant for European Olympic teams, "Everyday I include protein-rich dairy products in our menu to assure that meatless meals are nutritionally complete."

VEGETABLE LASAGNA

Sauce:
8 ounces whole wheat Or regular lasagna noodles
3 medium-sized ripe tomatoes, chopped
1 can (8 ounces) salt-free tomato sauce
1 can (6 ounces) salt-free tomato paste
1 medium-sized green pepper, chopped
1 medium-sized onion, chopped
½ teaspoon dried rosemary
½ teaspoon dried oregano
½ teaspoon dried thyme
½ teaspoon dried basil

Filling:
8 ounces fresh mushrooms, sliced
1 medium bunch broccoli flowerets
1 medium-sized onion, chopped
1 large zucchini, sliced
4 teaspoons Italian seasoning
¾ cup shredded Mozzarella cheese
¾ cup crumbled Feta cheese
2 tablespoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Cook noodles according to package directions; rinse; drain; set aside. Meanwhile, combine all sauce ingredients in large heavy saucepan. Bring to boiling, stirring frequently. Simmer, covered 10 minutes. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. For filling, combine vegetables and Italian seasoning; mix well. Place a small amount of sauce on the bottom of a 13x9-inch baking pan. Layer half the noodles, vegetables, sauce and cheeses; repeat once. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until cheese is melted and sauce is bubbly. Let set 5 minutes before serving.

ANSWER — Charles M. Mark Jr., Englishtown, N.J., requested a 13-hour bread recipe that he had made while living in Ecuador. Thanks to an unidentified contributor who sent in the following.

Salt Rising Bread

½ cup cornmeal
1 pint warm water
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ cup butter
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
3 quarts flour

The evening before baking, scald enough sweet milk with the cornmeal to make a moderately stiff batter. If set in a warm place, it will be light and fluffy in the morning. Add the water, baking soda and sufficient flour to make a stiff dough. Place in a pan of warm water to rise.

For 5 loaves, take 3 quarts flour; add butter, salt, sugar and the cornmeal mixture with water enough to make a stiff dough. Mold into loaves; let rise and bake 45 minutes. Much depends on keeping the batter warm and the stove properly heated.

Turophiles (cheese lovers) have something to smile about. According to publications from the American Dental Association, some cheeses actually protect teeth against tooth decay. Other foods that help your teeth stay strong and healthy: milk, popcorn, fresh vegetables and nuts.

Yogurt cheese is a delightfully tangy cream cheese-like spread and topper. To make yogurt cheese, line a colander with a double thickness of cheesecloth. Pour plain yogurt into the colander and set over a container. Let drain in the refrigerator overnight.

A well-stocked kitchen includes these special cheese knives: a pointed blade knife for hard cheeses such as Romano; a narrow, square-nosed knife for soft and semi-soft cheeses such as Brie; and a broad-bladed knife for crumbly cheeses such as Blue cheese.

Kid's Korner

Chamois graze high in the Alps. Although a few subspecies are considered endangered or threatened, the hardy, goat-like animals are generally doing well in the mountains of Europe, southwestern Asia, and New Zealand. When chamois' numbers grow too large, epidemics of blindness can thin herds by causing the agile cliff dwellers to fall to their death. Some conservationists hope that "harvesting" to control herd size will help reduce such epidemics.

Chamois Prosper In Europe

ZERNEZ, Switzerland — High on the treeless peaks of the Swiss National Park, the nimble chamois thrive.

An estimated 1,250 of the fleet creatures, relatives of goats and source of some of the world's softest leather, dwell in protected peace in this 105-square-mile preserve in southeastern Switzerland.

Hunting is banned in the pristine park, the only one of its kind in a small, landlocked nation. So are fishing, camping, flower-gathering, and other activities that might disturb the wildlife. Visitors are restricted to authorized trails.

For the chamois in the park, the protection is a mixed blessing. "The chamois are not making many problems," Robert F. Schloeth, director of the park, tells National Geographic. "But they are at the upper limit of population in some areas. We have to watch that very carefully."

Overpopulation can bring, among other things, a fly-carried eye disease that blinds large numbers of normally sure-footed chamois and sends them tumbling to their death from the precipitous crags of the Alps.

To prevent that from happening, park employees with rifles sometimes "harvest" -- the universal euphemism for such killing -- the appropriate number of animals to reduce their population to a size the land can support.

Like any lover of wildlife, Schloeth doesn't enjoy harvesting, and he doesn't face an immediate decision on chamois. On the other hand, he says, red deer and ibex have become overpopulated in the park.

Over the years, occasional outbreaks of blindness epidemics among chamois have been reported in the mountains of Europe, southwestern Asia, and New Zealand.

The region around the Swiss National Park hasn't had an epidemic for several years, and Schloeth isn't expecting one. He says of chamois blindness: "I hope that it will disappear in the area." But, he adds, "It's a natural method of controlling population. It's not necessarily bad."

That attitude is echoed by a leading European authority on chamois, zoologist Sandro Lovari of the University of Camerino in Italy. "Blindness has never wiped out any population of chamois," he says. "It will take maybe 25 percent of the population in an area. It's a natural factor regulating the population."

Outside parks, the agile high-altitude dwellers with upright, ringed horns are prized by hunters who, in most areas, shoot during closely regulated seasons in the autumn. Lovari is skeptical about hunters and their relationship to chamois blindness.

"I think chamois blindness may be so much rumor," he says, "because people use it as an excuse to go hunting inside a national park. A park and other large, protected areas are the only areas where you can find dense populations of animals."

In most areas, chamois face little danger of extinction. They are a species of mountain ungulate -- they have cloven hooves -- and their hooves are specially designed to enable them to run easily in snow. Chamois are quite flexible, quite adaptive." says Lovari.

Ten subspecies inhabit the mountains of Europe, from the Pyrenees to the Caucasus. Lovari says that only one subspecies, the Chartreuse of France, is endangered. Its chief problem is hunters' introduction of Alpine chamois, another subspecies. This has led to loss of genetic identity among the Chartreuse, which now number about 100.

Lovari counts as "threatened" the chamois in Italy's Abruzzo National Park, reduced to no more than 400 by inbreeding. It must be reintroduced or even introduced to other Apennine areas so that other alternative populations occur as well," he says.

A third subspecies. Turkish chamois, Lovari classifies as "undetermined," because it has been studied scarcely at all, and little is known about it.

The time to start protecting chamois populations, Lovari insists, is not when they are in decline, as are the Chartreuse and the Abruzzo, but when they are proliferating, as is the Alpine. "Prevention," he says, "is much better than finding a remedy."

The Gift That Keeps On Multiplying

If Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria had foreseen the results of his gift to New Zealand in 1907, he might never have given it.

The gift was eight chamois. In the hospitable climate of New Zealand's South Island, they reproduced at a staggering rate. They reached their peak number, some 160,000, in the early 1970s.

By then the browsing and grazing of the horned, goatlike animals were devastating vegetation and causing erosion in the mountainous areas where they lived. The introduced species had become a major ecological nuisance.

The government responded by hunting the overpopulated chamois with rifles fired from helicopters. The herds were thinned by one-third to one-quarter, Colin Clarke, senior technical officer of the New Zealand Forest Institute, tells National Geographic.

As a result of the hunting, the wary chamois have retreated to denser forests at lower altitudes on the western side of South Island, where they are difficult to shoot from the air. Clarke estimates their present population at 25,000 to 40,000.

Reduction of the chamois has brought about marked regeneration of plant species in the high country, but now Clarke worries about the lower forests: "Our concern is that chamois will increase quite dramatically over the next few years unless something is done."

Shake The Salt Habit

One thing that cannot be taken with a grain of salt these days is salt. That's because salt contains sodium and it has been identified as a contributor to high blood pressure, a problem of millions of Americans.

When low sodium diets or high blood pressure are mentioned, salt is what usually comes to mind. However, it is the sodium in the salt which is the culprit. Common table salt, known chemically as sodium chloride (NaCl) is 40% sodium. Table salt contributes 1/3 of our daily sodium intake while the remaining 2/3 is split equally between sodium occurring naturally in food, and the sodium used in the processing of the food we eat.

To keep sodium in perspective, it is important to understand both its positive and negative aspects. Sodium is an essential nutrient. In fact, we could not survive without it. Sodium helps regulate body fluids including blood, and maintains the balance of fluids and pressure inside and outside the cells. It also plays a major role in nerve impulse transmission, heart action, and the metabolism of carbohydrates and protein.

Most of us get too much sodium. Sodium is measured in milligrams. The recommendation for most people is 2000 milligrams of sodium per day. This is the equivalent of one teaspoon salt. Most Americans consume between 2400 and 7200 milligrams of sodium daily. The average consumption is about 6000 milligrams daily.

We may be eating more salt today because more of our food is processed and pre-seasoned.

About the only processed foods not salted are canned, dried or frozen fruits and juices, jams and jellies, and some frozen vegetables.

Most of you know that salt is added to bread, even though it does not taste salty. We taste the salt in butter, margarine, canned vegetables and it's listed on the label. But would you suspect salt in cottage cheese? It's there and in buttermilk too.

Much saltier are catsup, pickles, prepared mustard, olives, potato chips, salted popcorn, soda crackers, corn beef, bacon, salt pork and ham.

Some foods are much saltier in one form than in another. For example, processed cheese spreads are about twice as salty as natural cheddar cheese; prepared French or Italian salad dressing may be as much as four times as salty as mayonnaise; very thin stick pretzels may be twice as salty as thicker pretzels.

Among the very saltiest of foods are bouillon cubes and soy sauce. Soy sauce has 4 to 6 times the salt as the same amount of catsup.

When you shop, select less salty foods. For example, buy unsalted peanuts rather than salted peanuts for snacks. At home, try removing the salt shaker from the table, and cook your foods without adding salt.

Most herbs, spices and table wines do not contain sodium and they make an excellent substitute for salt as seasonings. You will find that black pepper, onion, green pepper, garlic, lemon juice and vinegar complement and enhance the natural goodness of foods.

Try the following herb combinations, and use them in cooking and put some in your salt shaker for use at mealtime.

All-Purpose Salt Free Seasoning

2 tablespoons dried oregano
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon onion powder
1/2 teaspoon black pepper
1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper

Combine and store in salt shaker.

Herb Blend For Poultry

2 tablespoons sage
1 tablespoon savory
2 tablespoons parsley
2 tablespoons celery leaves
1 tablespoon marjoram
1 tablespoon thyme

Combine and store in salt shaker or jar.

Herb Blend For Fish

2 tablespoons parsley
1 teaspoon fennel seed
4 teaspoons dill weed
1/2 teaspoon lemon thyme

Combine and store in salt shaker or jar.

Vicki Greer poses with Windover Sin-D-Kate and her newest filly, W.B. Alluremint.

Breeding Champions At Win' Blu' Stables

BY LISA RISSER

WAKEFIELD (Lancaster) — Months of careful nurturing and hoping culminate into one moment when love's labor pushes the tiny foal into the world. A champion is born.

Win' Blu' Stables breeds registered Morgan champions under the watchful eye of owners Vicki Greer and her husband, Charles. To date their primary Morgan stallion, Windover Enchantmint, or The Mint as they call him, has sired 14 champions, including one grand national champion, during his six years as a stud.

One key to breeding champions is "to breed horses able to become champions," said Vicki. Conformation is important as are stamina and disposition. "We breed for a pretty horse that can perform and enjoy doing it," she added. "That's the key to any breeding program."

When looking at conformation, Vicki searches for strong, straight legs that won't have the tendency to bow. She also wants horses that are large in size because this tends to mean they'll be stronger to perform. Bone structure is important too, and Vicki breeds for shoulder angles on driving horses. If the shoulders don't have the proper angle, they won't hold the overcheck for carts.

W.B. Alluremint

The Mint, as the Greers' prized Morgan stallion is nicknamed, has 50 foals on the ground, 14 of which are champions including a 1988 grand national champion.

Triple J Peppermint goes through some of his paces. Pepper is Win' Blu' Stables' junior stud.

After a Win' Blu' foal is born training begins immediately. "We begin making them champions when they're still babies," stated Vicki.

To develop a herd sense and competitive spirit, the foal is turned out into the pasture with others around its age. "We let them grow as close to the natural way as is possible. We don't treat them as potted plants like some stables do, and keep them in their stall at all times," explained Vicki.

The foals can cavort and play for several months until their first summer when their show season begins. Winter and spring months aren't all free time for the foals, however, as they have been learning manners during this time.

The foals are handled frequently be the Greers and their workers to accustom the horses to being around humans. The horses also learn to keep their teeth and hooves to themselves.

"Most babies bite and kick, and as soon as they do, we correct them," Vicki commented. "Horses learn fast at a young age, and when they're older, they'll remember what they learned at this time. If you let a horse go when he bites as a baby, he'll bite when he's older."

In addition to learning proper manners and a good attitude about

Win' Blu' Stables

people, foals at Win' Blu' are exposed to blaring radios and moving golf carts to become acclimated to noises and circumstances similar to that of a show environment.

Training for performance events such as riding, cart driving, and races begins when the foals become two-year-olds. All training is handled by Vicki and Charles.

Picking a winner

Not all horses trained to show on the farm are owned by Win' Blu', and not all foals born on Win' Blu' are trained to show. As a foal grows, the Greers watch it carefully. "We study the behavior and attitude of a horse, which tells us how good it will be as a show horse," explained Vicki. "We sell the ones without a showman character. We receive less money for it than if it was trained to show, but we don't try to force a horse to be what it is not. There's a horse for every purpose."

According to Vicki, the best horses are those that are aggressive and show off immediately. The young foal is not afraid of strangers, investigates everything, and skips around the pasture when people are watching, especially when another horse is in the same paddock.

If a foal shows promise but seems fearful or less aggressive than others, Vicki tries to develop confidence and aggression. For instance, a fearful horse will be pastured with a confident one so that it learns by the other's actions not to be afraid. Or, two quiet horses will be put together in hopes of developing show-off qualities. A quiet horse wouldn't be put with a dominant one because then it would always be shy and meek.

The premier pair in Win' Blu' Stables at this time are The Mint, their Morgan stallion, and Windover Sin-D-Kate, a 10-year-old mare. Kate was purchased first, in 1978, as a weanling. Out of Katheryn Command by UVM Sinbad, Kate won several A-Rated championships in English pleasure riding, park under saddle, pleasure driving, Western pleasure riding, and in-hand, as the conformation classes are called.

The Mint

Four years later The Mint caught the Greers' eyes as a weanling. A Beamington son, The Mint was a full sister to Windover Enchantress, who was a world-record holder in championship titles. The Greers signed a first-option-to-buy contract with Mint's owners one week before Beamington died. The Greers got Beamington's last son.

As a three-year-old, The Mint, who won several in-hand and driving championships, was injured in a training accident which left his left hind leg crippled. Now he is strictly a stud with offspring in California, New York, North Carolina, and many places in between.

The pair's first foal, a colt named W.B. Commandmint, was sold as an undefeated two-year-old pleasure driving championship.

Commandmint was sold minutes before he was to compete in the pleasure-driving class at the New England Morgan Horse Show. He went on to win the competition's reserve championship spot under a different driver.

W.B. Enticemint is the pair's first filly and Kate's second foal. She was sold as a weanling after winning the Mid-Atlantic weanling filly class in 1985. Three years later Enticemint went to the Grand National Morgan Show in Oklahoma under trainer Scott Facker and became the 1988 national English pleasure riding champion.

W.B. Enjoymint, a filly, was next. She competed in and won the same weanling filly class that Enticemint did a year earlier. She too was purchased after the show.

Tragedy struck the pair's fourth foal, which was a still born. But last year's foal is a colt named W.B. Enrichmint, and this year brought a filly named W.B. Alluremint. She was born on January 21, 1989.

Junior stud

Also stabled on the farm is Triple J. Peppermint, a three-year-old Mint son out of Hoosier Sunny Aire. "We liked the colt so much when we saw him, that we bought him as a weanling," explained Vicki. Peppermint's dam is owned by Betty and Larry Derrenkamp of Lancaster.

The Greers purchased Peppermint as the potential replacement for Mint should anything happen to the Mint. "We bought him because he's quite rare in two ways," said Vicki. "First, he's 15.2 hands as a two-year-old, which is quite tall for a Morgan. We think he'll be as tall as The Mint, who is 15.3 hands. We also bought him because he's a black chesnut with a flax mane and tail and he's got four white socks. That's an unusal combination."

The Greers intend to train Peppermint and hope to take him to the grand nationals to "follow in his sister's hoof steps," Vickie quipped. He already has won championships in driving and conformation.

A yearling colt called Nisara's Adam's Mark recently was added to the Greers' Morgan herd. A beautiful black, he will be raised primarily as a stud to breed Mint's fillies to. His first mate will be Aluuremint, the new filly.

A born horse lover

Vicki, a native of White Marsh, Md., was horse crazy from the start. She became a 4-H'er as a nine-year-old and joined a pony club. Her love affair with Morgans began with her first, Devan Trace, which she received when she was 13.

Vicki's parents were looking for a horse to buy for her at a show. They were going to buy a Thoroughbred, but it bowed a tendon shortly before an agreement was reached. Trace's owners invited them to look at him.

"The people modeled him and suggested I ride him," Vicki recalled. "They took us to a big field, one man on either side of us holding Trace. When they let go, Trace reared, and took off. My dad said 'I'll buy him.' I was thrilled to death with Trace."

At the time of his sale, Trace was a good horse, but had a strain, and his owners felt he'd never show again. They were wrong.

Vicki worked with Trace, a rather wild, high-spirited horse, and went on to win in-hand classes and 50-mile competitive trail rides. At age 13 he was the reserve champion at the Grand National in the road hack division of English pleasure riding. He also won the trotting roadster class.

"Trace taught me a lot," Vicki commented. "He taught me how to understand the psychology of a horse: how to work with him instead of forcing him to do something."

Trace also is the only horse Vicki has refused to part with. The 23-year-old gelding grazes in the pastures as Win' Blu'.

As she was growing up, Vicki knew she was going to work with horses in some manner. "At first I wanted to become a veterinarian, but I realized as a vet I wouldn't have time to ride as much as I wanted to."

Instead Vicki became a trainer and manager. The basics she learned from others, but everything else came from her own experiences. "You have to get out there and experience what works and what's easiest," she said.

Vicki attracted several people's attention while she was showing, they sent her horses to train, and she was on her way as a trainer, which she has been doing professionally since she was 19 years old. At one point she was a licensed exercise jockey at Pimleco Race Track, but as she received more and more horses to train she decided to stop exercising race horses.

Before building Win' Blu' Vicki was manager and trainer at Inglewood Stable and South Hampton Horse Center where she worked with all horse breeds.

In 1982 Vicki and Charles, who is a Quarter Horse enthusiast, purchased 30 acres of corn field across from Charles' parents' home for Win' Blu' Stables. The two built an indoor arena, large outside ring, a show barn, a brood mare barn, two turn-out pastures with sheds, and six paddocks. Just down the road is Charles' log yard, which keeps him busy during fall, winter, and spring. Summers he spends helping Vicki train horses.

Summer is a busy time for Win' Blu' Stables and its owners. It's the time they're training their champions, and dreaming of champions yet to come.

Program on Radon

UNIVERSITY PARK — In the not-too-distant future, homeowners may be required to document radon levels before putting their homes on the market. "Sooner or later, everyone involved in residential real estate transactions will need to be aware of the presence of radon," says Dr. Phyllis Barner, assistant professor of agricultural and extension education at Penn State. "Consumers need to be informed about what options they have to measure radon's presence and what methods will reduce those levels, if necessary."

To answer the growing number of questions raised by homeowners, Penn State Cooperative Extension is offering "Radon in the Home," a program to inform the public about the causes, hazards and elimination of radon. Extension's philosophy regarding radon and other indoor pollutants is to go out into the community with educational programs and supporting information that will help homeowner make intelligent decisions based on their particular situations," Dr. Barner says. "I've spoken about radon to many groups, from educators to construction professionals to high school students."

In this program, consumers are given basic information about radon -- what it is, where it comes from and how to test for it. Also included is more complex information about the legal implications for home buyers and sellers and the potential liabilities for housing professionals. "Those are very real issues associated with radon that need to be addressed," says Dr. Barner.

After 11,000 homes in seven states were tested for the presence of radon, the EPA and the U.S. Surgeon General reviewed the results. On Sept. 12, they urged all homeowners to check their homes for radon. EPA now believes that between 5,000 and 20,000 lung cancer deaths annually can be attributed to breathing radon-laden air.

Some question the accuracy of this estimate. An opinion piece in the Oct. 6 New York Times suggests that scientific studies have not yet proven that a clear relationship exists between lung cancer and exposure to hazardous levels of radon gas. The EPA recommendations are based on epidemiological studies of uranium miners.

Dr. Barner maintains that the controversy will continue until conclusive results are obtained. "Meanwhile, testing for the presence of radon is relatively inexpensive and we are advising all homeowners to have their homes tested. It's better to be safe than sorry," she says.

Radon is a colorless, odorless and tasteless by-product of decaying radium, itself the result of uranium decay. Radon is present in most rocks and soils throughout the world and is harmless when released into the atmosphere. The hazard occurs when the gas enters a home, becomes trapped inside and continues to decay. The resulting radioactive particulates, or "radon daughters," can then be easily inhaled and lodged in lung tissue.

Several types of easy-to-use home testing devices are available. The most common instruments used to detect radon are the short-term activated charcoal canisters for a two-to-seven-day test, and the longer-term alpha track detectors for a three- to twelve-month testing period.

A testing device is placed in an area of the house that is in contact with the soil, such as a basement or a room directly above a crawl space. The testing instrument should remain untouched in that location for the duration of the testing period. It is then sealed and sent to the laboratory for analysis. A report with an explanation of the findings is returned in approximately two weeks. If the results suggest the presence of radon above a level considered safe, more extensive testing is suggested as the next step.

Unfortunately, there is no reliable method to test a construction site for radon and use the results to predict radon levels in a home not yet built. Builders, realizing the potential hazards, are now incorporating radon-reduction measures in new construction. For existing dwellings, other radon-reducing measures may be necessary. EPA recommends sealing large cracks and applying impermeable barriers to foundation walls and basement floors as first-step measures. More costly sub-slab and block wall suction methods may be necessary if radon levels are high.

"Extension's 'Radon in the Home' program is timely and offers important information to anyone who owns a home or is thinking of building or buying one," says Dr. Barner. "Maintaining safe radon levels is an important family health issue."

For more information concerning extension's free radon program, contact Dr. Phyllis A. Barner, 208 Armsby Building, University Park, PA 16802.

Cold Weather Food Tips

Did you ever think how some foods are "winter" while others are "summer"? Chili, potato chowder, sauerkraut, and oatmeal are examples of cold weather favorites. They sound like they should be served when the temperature outside is frigid. The same foods are probably not as appealing on a 90-degree day in July!

According to Judy Dodd, a registered dietitian for Dairy & Nutrition Council, tradition dictates much of our food selection. Some popular cold weather foods in this region of the country are a result of past generations having to exist on foods that could be stored in winter. Dried beans, grains, root vegetables, and home canned products were the principle foods. Soups, stews, and casseroles were the center of most meals.

Lack of central heating is another factor that affected food selection in the past. The kitchen fire or cooking area was frequently a source of heat for much of the house. As a result, foods that took a long time to cook were popular. Baking beans overnight meant a warm oven and a warm kitchen for a night and part of a day. The bonus was hearty food for one or more meals!

In this day of central heating and air conditioning, processed foods, and microwaves, the practical side of food selection is not as critical. It's possible to have most foods regardless of the season. Why then, do we still think in terms of traditional foods?

There may be a health message in all of this! Many of the foods we associate with cold weather are higher calorie foods. Heavy outdoor work and lack of central heating required that food provided sufficient calories. The ingredients traditionally available in the cold weather months were used for mixed or baked foods that supply needed calories.

Now, where do you fit into this picture? If you live and work in a controlled heat environment and if your lifestyle doesn't demand extra cold weather calories, take heed! Enjoy the foods of the season but remember to watch the portions! Baked beans or macaroni with cheese should substitute for the meat portion of the meal, not served as the side dish.

Carlisle Hosts Tri-State Dairy Reproduction Seminar

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — The last of three Tri-State Dairy Reproduction Seminars will be held at the Carlisle Quality Inn's Embers Convention Center on Thurs., Feb. 23, from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. The seminar is primarily for dairy farmers, though agribusinesspersons, artificial breeding personnel, county extension agents and veterinarians also may attend.

The seminar features speakers from Penn State, the University of Maryland, and Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. Penn State's Dr. Michael O'Connor, associate professor of dairy science, will open the morning session with an address on the basics of reproductive management. VPI's Dr. W. Dee Whittier will speak about nutrition, health disorders and reproduction. Dr. Mark Varner, from the University of Maryland, will close the morning session with a discussion of new estrus detection aids.

Penn State professor of veterinary science Dr. Larry Hutchinson will open the afternoon session with an address on maximizing rebreeding efficiency. VPI's Dr. Ray L. Nebel will discuss applications of milk progesterone testing. Dr. Doug Carmel of the University of Maryland will give the seminar's final address, on using hormones and antibiotics to ease post-partum difficulties. The seminar will close with a question and answer period.

The seminar is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and the extension services of the University of Maryland, VPI, and Virginia State University. Contact your county Cooperative Extension office for a registration form.

For more information about the Carlisle seminar, contact Dr. O'Connor at (814) 863-3913.

The seminar in Carlisle is the last in a series of three Tri-State Dairy Reproduction seminars. The program is the same for all three seminars. The first will be held at the Firehall in Edinburg, Va., on Tues., Feb. 21. For more information on the Edinburg seminar, contact Edward Conklin at (703) 459-3739. The second will be held at Garrett Community College in McHenry, Md., on Wed., Feb. 22. For more information on the McHenry seminar, contact Jim Simms at (301) 334-1990. Registration for the Carlisle and Edinburg seminars costs $6. Dairy farmers and others who would like to participate are welcome to preregister for the most convenient seminar.

Feeling Cold?

NEWARK, DE. — Everyone knows that an iron stove generates heat, but a recent study by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) suggests that iron intake can affect how cold or warm a person feels. "The ability to regulate body temperature in the cold may depend on the amount of iron consumed daily," says Dr. Sue Snider, University of Delaware Extension nutritionist.

Study participants, all women, felt colder and lost more body heat after a period of takiong only 6 mg of iron daily than after a period of eating a diet adequate in iron and taking an iron supplement. The recommended daily allowance (RDA) for iron is 18 mg.

After each period, the women sat in an environmental chamber with a constant temperature of 64 degrees Fahrenheit and a gentle breeze. According to Snider, their internal and skin temperatures dropped when their iron intake was low, despite increased production of norepinephrine, a hormone that speeds up metabolism and heat production.

The participants' average hemoglobin concentration (which indicates iron status) didn't go below normal during the low-iron period. Snider says more research is needed to confirm this finding, but it may offer another reason why it's important to consume an adequate amount of iron daily. "Even if you test in the normal range for hemoglobin concentration, you could still have problems feeling cold if you're not getting the recommended amount of iron each day."

Snider says you should get iron from a variety of foods since the body doesn't absorb iron equally well from all food sources. She offers the following suggestions for increasing iron in the diet:

* Eat foods that are high in iron, such as lean red meat, fish, poultry, liver, dried peas and beans, and leafy green vegetables.

* Eat food combinations that can increase the body's absorption of iron. For example, small amounts of meat, fish and poultry can help the body absorb iron from plant sources. Foods rich in Vitamin C have a similar effect. So eating an orange for lunch with a sandwich will help your body absorb more of the iron in the bread.

* For grain-based foods, choose whole-grain or enriched products.

* Use iron pots for cooking. Tomatoes and other high-acid foods leach iron from cast-iron pots and pans.

* Drink tea and coffee about an hour before meals instead of with meals. Tea contains substance called tannins, which can reduce iron absorption. To a lesser extent, coffee also reduces the body's absorption of iron.

* If you use antacids frequently, consult your doctor about other ways to ease digestion problems. Certain antacids can reduce iron absorption.

Be cautious about taking iron supplements, Snider says, since too much iron over an extended period can cause liver damage. Before taking a supplement, she advises checking with your doctor to find out whether you need a supplement and, if so, what type and quantity you should take.

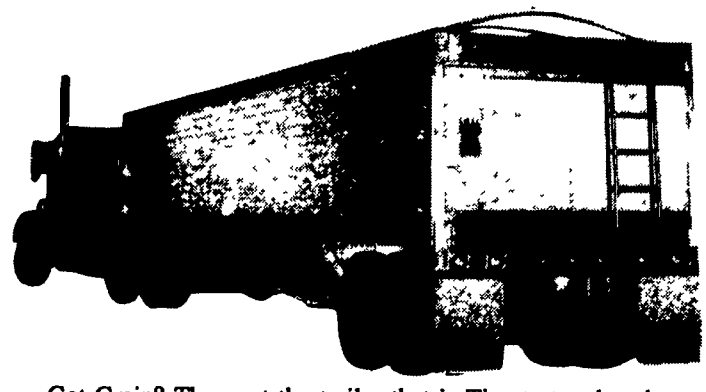
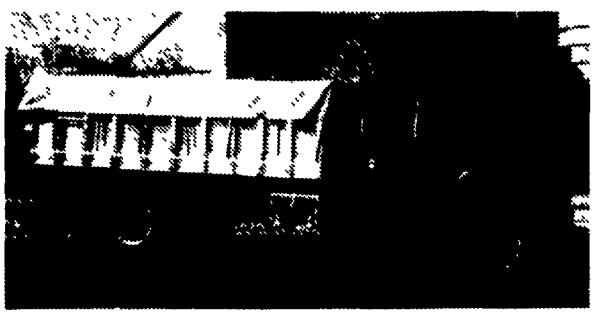
REDESIGNED 1989 TIMPTE GRAIN HOPPER

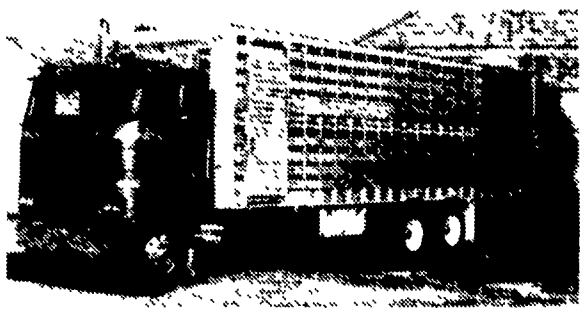


Got Grain? Then get the trailer that is Timpte tough... the Super Hopper. It's not only built to take it...it's also built to cut fuel costs. The Super Hopper is lightweight and aerodynamically designed to reduce wind drag. When there's grain to be hauled, Timpte does the haulin' best and pulls a lot easier than the rest.

M.H. EBY, INC.
Box 127, Blue Ball, PA 17506 (717) 354-4971

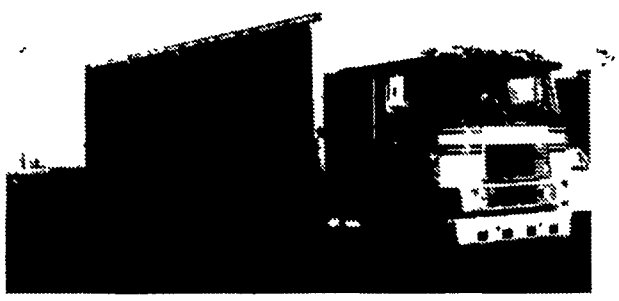


An Eby grain body is surprisingly affordable and built for the long haul.

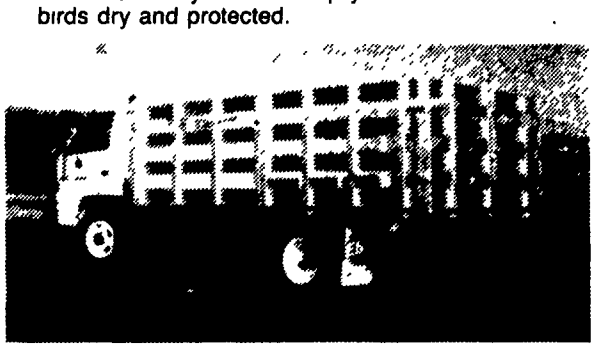


Reliable Eby livestock bodies are now aerodynamically designed.

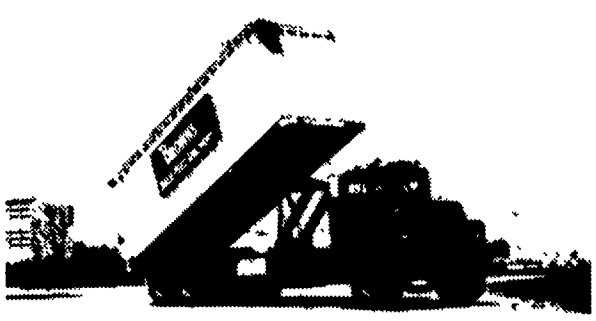
Eby's bolt-on extends the usefulness of your pickup for minimal investment.



A chicken body built to keep your birds dry and protected.



Eby stake body is the right choice for farm or commercial use.



Consider an Eby bulk body for reliability and ease of use.

Aluminum Bodies for the Agri-Industry

Back in 1938, when Menno Eby Sr. began making wagons and cattle trucks, he was determined to give farmers strong, wooden truck bodies at a competitive price.

Some things change. Others stay the same.

Today, M. H. Eby, Inc. produces a wide variety of sturdy and reliable truck bodies for agri-business. Everything from livestock bodies through stake bodies to grain and bulk bodies. All at competitive prices.

But now every Eby body is all-aluminum. Consider some of the advantages you get over traditional wood and steel construction:

- As much as 50% lighter — allows for increased payloads.
- It will never rust through or rot.
- No need to paint.
- Overall maintenance costs are greatly reduced.
- Just an occasional power washing keeps aluminum bodies looking new for years.
- They have much better resale value.

What's more, you can always tell Eby what you want on your body. Everything we make is custom-built. A long list of options available for every body style allows you to design the body you need for your operation.

Give us a call, or write, to find out more about the lightweight alternative.

Let FARMER BOY AG.'s Experienced Staff Discuss The Design And Cash Flow Of A Swine Barn To Meet Your Specifications

Scarff Bros. Have New Barn For Family Business

Fallston, MD—Pick out any of the 1200 open or bred heifers the Scarff Brothers have on inventory and Howard will tell you where she came from and where she is going--going to maybe Texas, Florida, Colorado or even Puerto Rico. This ability to remember each animal and an educated eye for good Holstein replacement stock have made Howard, age 25, and his brother Lance, age 22, among the youngest, successful cattle dealers around.

"I taught the boys to work," says their father W. Conly Scarff. "And while they have had a lot given to them, they also earned a lot themselves."

The brothers now own the cattle business that was started by their grandfather in 1928 and the 165 acre family farm.In addition, they lease another 335 acres from their grandmother's estate. They raise 225 acres of corn for silage to feed their growing Holstein heifer replacement business.

The Scarffs buy heifers from dairy herds in the "country" that weigh from 400 to 600 pounds. These heifers come mostly from farmers in Pennsylvania and New York. Then the heifers are contracted out to farmers to feed until they are springing with their first calf. They sell the bred heifers by the trailer load to commercial dairymen across the country.

"We look for a large framed heifer that shows a lot of youthfulness," Conly said. "We don't want a stunted heifer. And since we sell 90 percent of our heifers without the buyer seeing them until they are at their new home, we want them to be thriving, healthy heifers. Our reputation depends on it."

Because of the optimism for the future of dairying, especially the export market for dairy animals, the Scarffs have just completed a new 122'x284' barn and loafing pen that's divided into six parts. The barn, built by A.K. Petersheim & Sons, Narvon, had Lapp's Barn Equipment, Gap, as general contractor and uses Zimmerman stalls. A 68x225 Sollenberger trench silo was built beside the new barn. The barn houses 500 heifers and was patterned after the Pennsylvania Holstein Association barn in Middletown.

The barn is 14 feet high inside and has a ventilator in the roof to siphon off the hot air from the animals. They also installed vent doors in back to adjust the air flow as needed. The barn faces east and allows the morning sun to shine back into the pens.

"The new barn is rather a luxury for us," Conly said. "Our family has been raising heifers out in the open for quite some time. My father did it before us. Until recently, the business was not large enough to justify a new barn. In addition, my father put every extra dollar into land. He thought barns depreciate but land appreciates."

And the Scarffs have reason to believe their father and grandfather was right. The land around their farm sells for $100,000 to $125,000 for one or two acres. But they still feel that their new barn was needed to keep better hands-on management of the heifers.

"No question the cattle business supports the farming operation," Conly said. "But we're proud to keep the family business going right in the heart of this area where development pressure has pushed many of our neighboring farms into $350,000 to $650,000 homes. I'm not sure what kind of a job you must need to have to own a house like that, but they sell them as fast as they build them."

Conly expressed appreciation to other cattle dealers who helped his sons get established in the business. He said that competitiveness among dealers is common. But many dealers, especially in the Lancaster area, helped his sons when they were inexperienced. "These dealers could have taken advantage of the boys, but they didn't," Conly said. "And we want to thank them for that."

Back in the late 1800's, Thomas Winfield Scarff bought the first ground for the family. Succeeding generations include: C. Howard Scarff, Sr., W. Conly Scarff and the Scarff brothers, C. Howard II and Lance N.

"It feels good to be on the land where your family has lived for generations," Lance said. "And even today we keep things in the family. We do all the work, the buying and selling. We have hands-on management that gives us a chance to discern the needs of our customer and his opperation too."

And with this fourth-generation, farm-cattle business team of Howard and Lance in charge, this hands-on family management is likely to continue for quite some time.

This new barn houses 500 bred and open heifers.

Rutt Named To State Ag Board

HARRISBURG — Rep. John E. Barley today announced that a southern Lancaster County farmer has been named to the state's new Agricultural Land Preservation Board.

Barley said Kenneth M. Rutt, of Edgefield Farms near Quarryville, was appointed to the board by House Republican Leader Matthew J. Ryan for the 1989-1990 session of the General Assembly.

"Ken Rutt is well qualified to serve on the state board, having been recognized by his peers as a successful farmer and agribusinessman," said Barley. "He's been very active, not only in the agricultural community, but in many civic and community endeavors."

Barley pointed out that Rutt was recognized as a Master Farmer in 1983 and has served as president of both the Lancaster County 4-H Council and the Lancaster County Extension Service. He served on the Lancaster County Planning Commission's Land Use Advisory Committee for 12 years and was manager of the Solanco Fair Association from 1967 to 1978.

Rutt is also a director of the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and serves as chairman of the Chamber's Agriculture Committee.

Rutt will be one of two Lancaster countians on the 17-member State Agricultural Land Preservation Board. Rep. Kenneth E. Brandt (R-98th District) will serve by virtue of his position as Republican chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

The board was created under House Bill 442 (Act 149 of 1988), which was cosponsored by Barley and enacted into law in December. The panel is responsible for reviewing farm preservation proposals from counties around the state and approving funds to support those preservation efforts.

"Agricultural land preservation is crucial to Lancaster County and our county is expected to be the largest recipient of preservation funds from the state," noted Barley. "We're very fortunate to have both Ken Rutt and Rep. Brandt on the board representing the southern and northwestern portions of the county."

Cotners Receive National Soil, Water Award

HARRISBURG — Donald and Jane Cotner of Danville received the prestigious National Soil and Water Award in conjunction with the 73rd Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff made the presentation to the Cotners on behalf of the National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation and the DuPont Company, sponsors of the award.

The Cotner family was one of 10 national finalists in the program. They were selected for their ability to accomplish comprehensive agricultural-resource management and pollution abatement. They have a 1,000-acre crop, beef, and poultry farm in Northumberland County.

"Conservation is a crucial part of today's agriculture," Wolff said. "We have to conserve our resources so future farmers can accomplish more of the production miracles on which our citizens have come to depend. Tonight we pay tribute to some important people who protect soil and water resources as they farm.

"The Cotners symbolize the conservation efforts made by many of the producers in Pennsylvania. We recognize their efforts and we congratulate them for their award."

Don Cotner was a director of his local conservation district for 20 years. He has been at the forefront in implementing a number of new ways to protect national resources in agriculture. He was one of the first in central Pennsylvania to install contour strips. He has installed more than four miles of permanent soil-conservation practices such as terraces, diversions, and grassed waterways. He was a pioneer in the county in adopting the no-till method of planting corn and has consistently been one of the highest producers. The same techniques are used to establish winter cover crops.

The Cotners also have animal-waste facilities capable of storing more than six months' accumulation of poultry manure from their 200,000 layers so they don't have to spread manure on their fields in winter. Improved water quality is an important bonus from this conservation practice.

"Soil is our most important natural resource," Cotner said. "I have always felt that as stewards of the land we should strive to not only maintain our soil, but improve it as much as possible each year. Finally, it is more profitable to keep our plant food in our soil than to have it wash away and pollute our streams and rivers."

The National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation, established in June 1982, is a non-profit, non-political organization dedicated to conserving the nation's agricultural resources and promoting a sense of stewardship for the land by all Americans.

KRAUSE TILLAGE INNOVATORS INVENTED THE ROCKFLEX DISC TO BRING PLEASURE TO FARMERS

1...Rugged, dependable performance.

2...Excellent penetration in tough conditions.

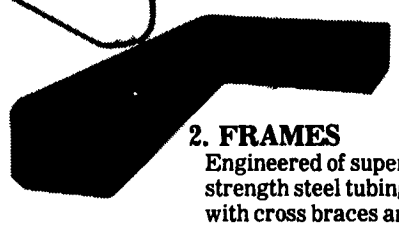
3...Level job every time.

4...Higher resale value when it's time to trade or sell.

5...More timely planting.

6...More time with the wife.

1. "SUPERSEAL" BEARINGS
Engineered to assure positive greasing directly into the cartridge. The triple lip seals keep grease in, dirt and moisture out.

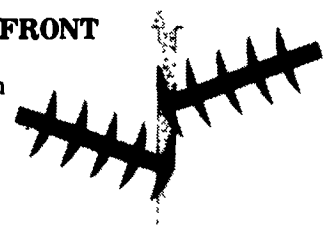


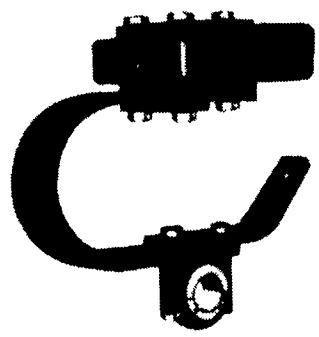
2. FRAMES
Engineered of super strength steel tubing with cross braces and gussets at major stress points.

3. WHEEL HUBS
Krause Made - Precision machined and regreasable. Every hub passes rigid inspection to assure proper tolerances.

4. TIE RODS AND SPOOLS
Alloy steel tie rods are 1¾" in diameter on heavy duty units (1½" on medium duty) - (30% to 70% stronger than many other brands.) There's a nut on both ends for easy servicing.
Krause spools are ductile iron, and weigh 20-to 30-lbs. each.

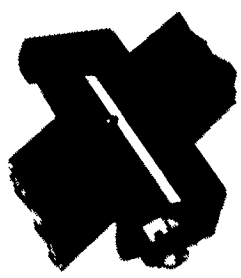
5. OVERLAPPING FRONT DISC GANGS
A unique Krause design for smoother, more uniform field finish. It eliminates the center strip of untilled ground left by conventional tandem discs.





6. "ROCKFLEX" BEARING ARMS
Krause invented the "Rock-Flex" arm in 1965. This unique C-shaped arm flexes over obstacles. It helps protect disc blades and spools from breakage. "SuperSeal" bearing is completely encased in rubber to absorb shock.

7. WING HINGES
Krause uses big 1¾" diameter bolts on heavy duty units (1½" on medium duty) with over 10" of wear surface area.



8. ROCKER SHAFTS
A full 6" in diameter with big steel tube wheel arms for maximum carrying capacity. Compare ours to other makes!

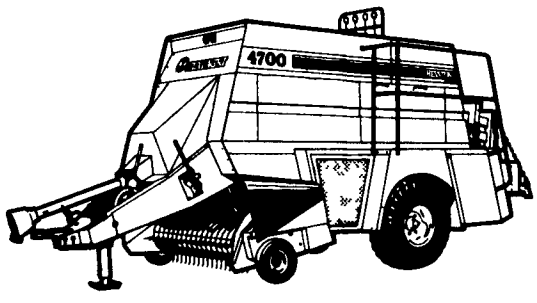
NEW IDEA

HESSTON THE PRIME LINE

The 4700 – A High Capacity Baler from Hesston

NEW



The new Hesston Model 4700 Baler shares many of the same proven design features of the Model 4900 and produces 31" x 32.5" x 4' to 8' adjustable length rectangular bales. Requiring a minimum of 75 PTO h.p., the Model 4700 produces bales of exceptional, uniform density which can weigh as much or more than many round bales. Add to this the increased stability in stacking or transporting plus the convenience of handling bales that easily separate into flakes for feeding.

Whether baling hay, or straw, the Hesston Model 4700 proves to be an outstanding performer, with a capacity of up to 20 tons per hour.

The leader keeps leading

Introducing Hesston's 8200 self-propelled windrower

ALL NEW

- Featuring 110" hay conditioning

Powered by a 77 HP Fiat Diesel or an optional 70 HP gas engine, the 8200 leads the way in big hay operations with it's optional 12-foot and 14-foot high capacity headers

The 8200 sets a new standard in operator comfort and convenience just a push of the switch sets the header floation header lift is controlled on the hydro command lever, it's all done from the seat of your pants in a quiet, roomy, air conditioned cab

The high speed sickle (1690 spm) drive is a good match for the crop-hungry fully engaged (110") hay conditioner

Newest addition to the 66 Series

Orchard Special
- Hesston Model 60-66 – 51 HP
- Hesston Model 70-66 – 62 HP
- Hesston Model 80-66 – 70 HP

Hesston is proud to introduce these fine new tractors They are loaded with all the standard features found on all the other 66 series models, but offer a very compact design that makes them ideal for use in orchards, hopyards and vineyards Available in either 2-wheel or mechanical 4-wheel drive, they are also equipped with wide 14 9-24 R1 6PR high flotation rear tires to reduce soil compaction Provided with either the 3 cylinder - 51 hp (0-66) or the 4 cylinder - 62 hp (70-66) or 70 hp (80-66) 8000 series engines, these beauties deliver the economy and power you have come to expect from Hesston

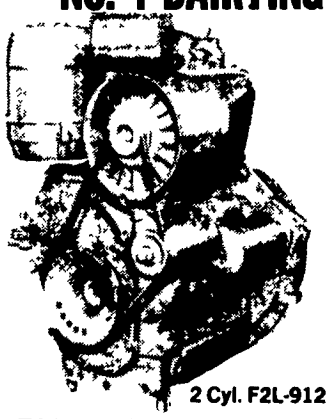
NO. 1 DAIRYING DIESEL



2 Cyl. F2L-912

KHD DEUTZ

Since 1968 F2L-912 diesels have earned the reputation as the most reliable diesel. Don't settle for less.

EASIER STARTING: Heavy flywheel provides easy starting. No electric heater plugs.

QUIETER: Runs quieter than most water cooled diesels. Very quiet exhaust.

Continuous Duty Rating: 26.5 HP @ 1800 RPM

Fewer repair parts than comparable three-cylinder diesels - cheaper to overhaul.

It has direct injection, lube oil cooling, and oil cooled pistons. This engine has proven to survive the extreme heat of a heavy load in a small engine house better than any other engine.

PLUS-FAMOUS DEUTZ FUEL ECONOMY

Don't get clipped.

Repairing that old unloader may not be your wisest choice...

Repair costs can clip you for a lot more dollars than you might think. In fact a new unloader may not cost much more during "Hanson's Limited Time Unloader Special". So before you repair that old unloader, check with Hanson. Performance, dependability and value. That's the Hanson difference.

THE ANSWER TO LOW-LABOR MULTIPLE FEEDING WAS RIGHT UNDER OUR NOSES ALL THE TIME... AND IT ISN'T COMPUTERIZED!

It took a dairyman to invent such a perfect feeder.

GRAIN BRAIN MULTIFEEDER BY STARLINE

We call this exciting new Starline feeder, "Grain Brain"™ because it "thinks for itself" Here's how it works. When you do your regular feeding, you also fill your "Grain Brain"™ multifeeders. Grain Brain™ does the rest. At the time you have preset into Grain Brain™ the multifeeders drop feed for each cow's next feeding That means you go from two or three time to four or six-time-per day feeding with no extra labor!

A Grain Brain™ that will handle a 50-cow herd will cost you approximately $3,000, complete. Grain Brain™ is simple, easy to operate, reliable and capable of paying for itself in less than a year We're anxious to tell you the whole story, so see your Starline dealer soon By the way, "Grain Brain"™ was invented by a Minnesota dairyman for his own barn Now a lot of his neighbors have one, too

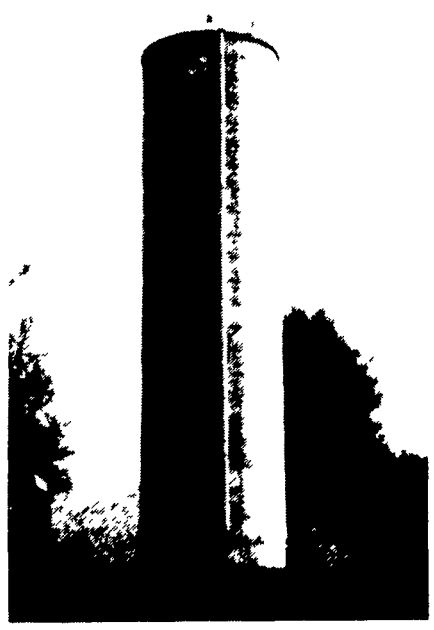
"Consider The Concrete Advantages"



The summer of 1988 will be remembered for the many hot, dry, days. These high temperatures damaged a lot of stored corn and forage in structures that have a thin wall and do not reflect heat. You can avoid this heat damage with a poured concrete SOLLENBERGER SILO.

FOR BOTTOM UNLOADING:

* LAIDIG 43 - Ideal unloader for high moisture ground ear corn or high moisture shelled corn.
* LAIDIG 98 or 198 - The bottom unloader for all forages.

CHIEF ADVANTAGE BUILDINGS

FAST, STRONG, AFFORDABLE.

Chief has taken the three major benefits you want and put them in a line of pre-engineered multi-purpose structures called Advantage Buildings. And they truly live up to their name.

Fast Delivery and Construction.

Chief Advantage Buildings are pre-engineered, and ready for delivery. All you do is choose the size that suits your requirements, whether storage, commercial or a small manufacturing facility.

Chief Advantage Buildings are erected quickly. Quality components are manufactured to exacting specifications for quick, secure construction.

Strong, Durable Construction.

All-steel construction and computer-engineering provide long-lasting strength and value. Structural members are electro-coated to resist corrosion and 26-gauge steel sidewall sheeting is standard. Chief's Ultra-Kote exterior finish is so tough, it resists chipping, cracking and abrasion for years even in the toughest environments. Extra strength features include bolted connections and weather-tight construction for long-term value.

Affordable.

Chief Advantage Buildings are ready now for delivery, so there are no design or special charges. And because all components are manufactured in quantity, and in advance, you save. Finally, because they are delivered fast and erected quickly, you take occupancy sooner, giving you a fast return on your investment.

See your Chief Builder and compare. You'll agree that Chief really does have the "Advantage."

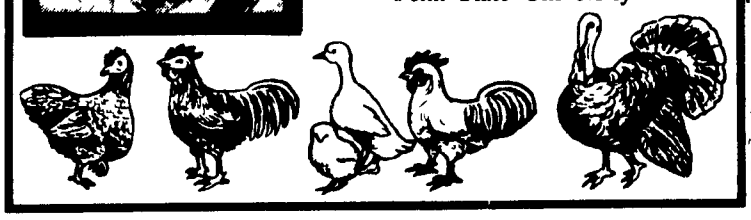
Lowdown on Layers

by
Owen Keene

Associate Professor of Poultry Science
Penn State University



Salmonella enteritidis (SE) cases of food-borne illness have sometimes been associated with Grade A table eggs. The frequency of SE in eggs appears to be very low. Also, practically all of the food-associated outbreaks have involved either raw, insufficiently cooked, or mishandled eggs or egg products. Usually these problems have occurred in public institutions. However, public health officials view SE as a major problem. Responsibility for preventing further outbreaks is being placed primarily with egg producers. A flock is classified as being infected when SE is found in one or more birds. When an infected flock is found, public health pressures have forced the producer into two options — depopulate the flock or send the eggs to the breaker plant for pasteurization. Since there is no indemnity, either option can be economically disastrous. Therefore, the poultry industry must take every preventive measure to reduce the SE problem.

Here are a few things that can be done.

1. Purchase chicks from hatcheries whose breeders are tested and negative for Salmonella enteritidis. Pennsylvania has been testing all breeder flocks within the State. Blood testing and bacteriological sampling (environment and dead embryos) are conducted each 90 days.

2. Testing of pullets during grow out and prior to placement as layers may help to assure repopulation of the layer house with SE negative birds.

3. At this time we do not know what degree of cleaning and disinfecting is required to assure that infection does not occur when new birds are housed in a previously contaminated house. Salmonella are very resistant bacteria and can survive for long periods in the environment. Therefore, when possible, houses should be cleaned and disinfected as carefully as houses were during the avian influenza outbreak.

4. Because rodents can be carriers of various Salmonella sp., a rodent control program is essential.

5. Various Salmonella sp. can sometimes be found in feed. Although at this time it has not been shown that feed is an important source of SE, every practical precaution to reduce the potential should be taken. Feed suppliers need to test their ingredients, particularly those of animal origin. Pelleting temperatures will usually kill salmonella organisms. Therefore, pelleted feed, if not recontaminated by conveyances, storage bins, or at the farm, can reduce salmonella contamination. Where economically feasible, the use of plant source protein can be considered.

6. Water sources should be clean and not accessible to wild bids or surface runoff. Chlorine sanitizers can be used at safe levels of 2-3 ppm in the drinking water. Wild birds can be carriers of many Salmonella species. Wild birds should never be permitted in a poultry house or allowed to contaminate the feed because they can be the sources of many diseases, including SE.

7. Hens should be kept in a healthy condition, avoiding undue stress. This helps the bird maintain resistance to disease.

8. Nest run eggs should be washed, sanitized and refrigerated. It has been suggested that producers, processors, retailers and food handlers refrigerate eggs at 45°F rather than 55°F or warmer. This is because any Salmonella bacteria present will rapidly multiply at higher temperatures but not grow at 45°. The important consideration is that eggs should be refrigerated immediately and kept that way until used. Cracked and dirty eggs should not be sold for shell egg use.

These are just a few things that, if practiced by all producers and egg handlers, may significantly reduce the potential for an economically devastating SE problem.

Research supported by funds from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) is in progress at Penn State and the University of Pennsyulvania. A voluntary control and testing program is also administered by the PDA.

Watch For Ringworm In Winter Months

EPHRATA (Lancaster) — Ringworm, a fungal infection caused by Trichophyton verrucosum, occurs in all animals. Since it occurs most commonly in animals housed in close quarters for long periods of time, the highest incidence of ringworm is during the winter months, warn Robert E. Leiby and David L. Dunbat, extension agents in Lehigh County. During the spring, animals seem to recover spontaneously.

This fungus grows on the surface of the skin and eventually penetrates to the hair follice. The hair becomes very brittle and breaks off at the skin's surface producing circular, bald patches. This area becomes thicker and covered with a heavy grayish--brown crust which flakes off. The areas most often affected by ringworm are the head and neck, especially the ears, nose and eyes, but it can cover the entire body. Sometimes, a secondary bacterial infection sets in. Then the lesions become moist and discharge pus.

Ringworm within a herd can be spread by indirect contact. The infected cattle can rub their heads against feed troughs, fence posts and barn walls for relief from the irritation. These areas are a source of infection for other animals. Ringworm can also be spread within a herd when brushes and other equipment not cleaned between uses are on infected and non-infected animals.

Penn State veterinarians offer the following recommendations for ringworm control: Spray infected animals with iodine or copper sulfate solutions. All parts of the body must be soaked thoroughly and solutions must be mixed according to the directions. It is also important to spray feeding areas and holding pens to help eliminate sources of contamination.

The only way to prevent ringworm is to avoid contact with infective animals and materials. When animals are housed in a building with ringworm, it is very difficult to prevent infection. Fungal spores can cling to walls and they may persist for many years in a dry environment. Painting or spraying walls with a sodium carbonate solution can help prevent infection. The fungus is killed by ultra-violet light. Therefore, sunlight can help animals recover. Wash all brushes and other equipment between uses. Cattle respond better to control and treatment measures when they are housed in less cramped conditions, fed an adequate diet, and supplemented wth vitamins A, D and E.

Animal caretakers should use appropriate precautions when working with infected animals.

Intensive Rotational Grazing, Pasture Management Meeting Set

FORT EDWARD, NY — Now is the time to start thinking about your pastures! With the advent of warm weather and spring rains, cool season grasses will be lush and prolific. This means high quality feed for your animals. Consider setting up an intensive rotational grazing system to take advantage of this abundant feed.

Intensive rotational grazing, or short duration grazing, means subdividing a pasture into smaller fields called paddocks. These paddocks are grazed in a sequence which allows animals to benefit from high protein, high quality feed. Pasture grasses also benefit, because the rest period allowed between grazings permits optimum plant growth and replenishment of root reserves.

Farmers benefit the most. Intensive rotational grazing saves labor and time, because livestock harvest their own feed.

To provide the most up to date information about this pasture management technique, Cobleskill College of Agriculture and Technology and the Empire State Chapter of the Soil and Water Conservation Society are co-sponsoring the 2nd Annual Northeast Regional Grasslands Exposition on Friday, March 31st, 1989. This one day event will run from 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. and will be held on the Cobleskill College Campus in Bouck Hall.

Punxsutawney Phil Says Plan For Spring Seedlings

DAUPHIN — Dauphin County Conservation District officials hoped that Punxsutawney Phil would not have seen his shadow on Groundhog Day. Unfortunately, the existing sunlight was sufficient for Phil to cast a shadow. When this subterranean weather forecaster turned around and saw his shaded companion, Phil was quoted to say, "Keep the fires burning and plan for your springtime gardening chores, because spring is six weeks away." The Conservation District shares Phil's advice and encourages everyone to take time and plan now for their spring landscaping needs.

For its fifteenth year the Dauphin County Conservation District is offering inexpensive planting stock during its annual seedling sale. These bareroot seedlings range in size and age from 8-20 inches for the three- to five-year-old evergreens and 12-30 inches for the one- or two-year-old hardwoods. A bundle of 10 evergreens will cost $5 or $6 and the hardwoods cost $1 each. Discount rates are available for 500 or more evergreens. No use restrictions are imposed for these seedlings.

Evergreens available are: Douglas Fir, Scotch Pine, Blue Spruce, White Pine, Norway Spruce and Fraser Fir. Hardwoods include: White Flowering Dogwood, Pin Oak, Sugar Maple, Thornless Honeylocust and Russian Olive.

Seedlings must be purchased by placing a prepaid order. Call the 24 hour "EVERGREEN LINE" at 921-8298 or write to the Dauphin County Conservation District, 1451 Peters Mountain Road, Dauphin, PA 17018 to request an explanatory order form. March 24, 1989 is the order deadline. Orders will be available for pick-up on Thursday, April 13, 1989 between 3:00 p.m. and 8:00 p.m. or on Friday, April 14, 1989 from 8:00 a.m. until 8:00 p.m. Unlike previous years there will be only one location to pick up orders. The Dauphin County Agriculture and Natural Resources Center on Route 225, two miles north of Dauphin Borough, shall be the permanent location of all future seedling sales.

USDA Releases Soil, Water Plan For 1990s

HARRISBURG — The U.S. Department of Agriculture released a ten-year update of the National Conservation program, designed to guide USDA soil and water conservation activities through 1997.

Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Peter Myers said the program lays the groundwork for increased coordination among the eight USDA agencies involved with soil and water conservation and with the farm community.

"Top priority will be reducing soil erosion, especially on highly erodible croplands, and protecting water quality and quantity," Myers said. "Setting national conservation priorities was a new idea when we adopted the first National Conservation program (NCP) in 1982, and it has made our programs much more effective."

Other major goals, said Myers, will be strengthening the conservation partnership with state and local agencies and other local groups, and increasing consistency and cost-effectiveness of USDA programs. The NCP was developed in response to the Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977 to guide USDA's soil and water conservation activities on non-federal land. The program is updated periodically to assure that USDA's soil and water conservation programs are responsive to the nation's long-term needs.

The new update, titled "A National program for Soil and Water Conservation: the 1988-97 Update," is the first since 1982. It responds to the changing conditions in world demand and agricultural production, new technology and crop supplies.

USDA agencies involved in conservation activities are the Agricultural Research Service, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Cooperative State Research Service, Economic Research Service, Extension Service, Farmers Home Administration, Forest Service and Soil Conservation Service.

Richard Duncan, State Conservationist in Pennsylvania for the USDA Soil Conservation Service said that partnership is the key to the success of the new program. "USDA conservation programs are voluntary, within the context of the 1985 Food Security Act, which this program fully supports," Duncan said. "Our role is to provide information and technical help to land users as they exercise private property rights and meet stewardship responsibilities to conserve and protect soil and water resources."

Duncan said the report reflects comments and concerns voiced by the public during the 1988 public review of the soil and water resources act and the draft plan. The public approved the establishment of erosion reduction and water quality as USDA's top conservation priorities, he said.

Other topics frequently referred to by respondents included USDA's plans for providing assistance for state and local priorities; linking USDA benefits to conservation goals; increasing research on low-input, sustainable farming methods; and developing practical conservation alternatives for small scale, limited resource and minority producers.

In establishing priorities, USDA also considered changes in resource conditions, the economy and national policies of Congress and the administration. The elevated priority of protecting the quality and quantity of surface and ground water will be addressed by the USDA programs of research, education and technical and financial assistance.

Copies of the report are available from state offices of USDA agencies or by writing the Secretary of Agriculture, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Toomey Named PAA President

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Auctioneers Association held its annual convention on January 12, 13, 14, at the Marriott Hotel. Auctioneers from across the entire state participated in a bid-calling contest, 12 different educational seminars, and the annual business meeting. At the meeting, Frederick Toomey, auctioneer from Hellam, Pa., was elected president of the statewide orgaization.

The main goal of the PAA, according to Toomey, is to provide the latest in educational information and professionalism to Pennsylvania auctioneers. President Toomey urges any auctioneers interested in joining the PAA to contact him at 717/755-6105.

Deere Presents New Row-Crop Tractor Line

New engine

All 55 series models feature a new John Deere 7.6L (466 cu. in.) six-cylinder diesel engine. The cylinder head, valve train, pistons and fuel injection system have been redesigned and new high-tech turbochargers improve performance, efficiency, and reliability. The cylinder head, intake and exhaust valves provide up to 20 percent more air flow. The larger-diameter valves combined with higher cam profiles provide increased valve lift which moves more air in and out of the cylinder. The high-efficiency turbocharger is matched to the increased air flow.

The piston's high-ring design provides less "dead" space, resulting in a higher compression ratio and more efficient combustion. The piston bowl is shallower but is larger in diameter, which contributes to better combustion efficiency and fuel economy.

The redesigned fuel injection system provides higher injection pressure with a faster injection cycle for improved torque performance throughout the rpm range. For example, the torque at 1000 rpm is higher than at rated speed. New seven-hole injection nozzles maximize fuel atomization for improved injection efficiency and fuel economy gains of up to 10 percent.

Engine reliability has been enhanced with a strengthened valve train with larger-diameter camshaft journals, solid-core push rods, larger-diameter cam followers, and stronger valve springs. The improved airflow raises the air/fuel ratio while reducing peak firing pressures and lowering internal operating temperatures. High-capacity lubrication and cooling systems are optimized for maximum efficiency and reliability.

Transmissions

The 16-speed (six reverse) Quad-Range™ transmission with Perma-Clutch™ is standard on all models except the 4955. A power-shiftable, hydraulic hi-lo provides no-clutch shifting between 1 and 2, 3 and 4, and R1 and R2. An on-the-go fully-synchronized shift can be made between 2 and 3.

The deluxe, full-powershift transmission is standard on the 4955 and optional on the 4055 through 4755. It provides 15 well-spaced forward speeds and four reverse speeds. Shifting is accomplished with a convenient single lever to shift on-the-go to any forward or reverse gear, neutral to any forward or any reverse gear, or shuttle shift between any forward and reverse gear without clutching or stopping.

Sound-Gard Body

Several new features have been added to the Sound-Gard Body for operator comfort, safety, and convenience.

Forward visibility has been improved by increasing the glass area by 13 percent. Urethane bonding of the front glass to the body improves appearance and sealing while eliminating the wide miter-cut rubber window seals.

Operator comfort is improved with a new swivel HydraCushioned® seat (which turns left or right 25 degrees), and air conditioner/heater. Both are standard equipment.

The interior color scheme is new and a new electronically-tuned sound system with four high-output speakers is available as an option.

The new IntelliTrak® instrument panel with "state-of-the-art" electronics -- standard equipment on all models -- monitors the engine, transmission, electrical and hydraulic systems. The system features built-in diagnostic capability to minimize downtime. An optional radar sensor measures true ground speed, distance traveled, area covered, and percent of slip.

Additional features

A new John Deere-designed and built "auto-engage," caster-action mechanical front-wheel-drive (MFWD) axle is optional on all models. The exclusive caster-action permits wheels to tilt and tuck under the tractor chassis for tight turns.

The MFWD can be engaged or disengaged on-the-go with an instrument panel rocker switch. With the switch in the "auto" position and both brakes engaged simultaneously, the MFWD will automatically engage to provide four-wheel braking for a shorter stopping distance. The MFWD will disengage when either brake is applied for shorter turns and it re-engages after the brake is released.

To reduce tire wear, the MFWD will automatically disengage when speed exceeds approximately 9 mph.

New cast rear-drive wheels simplify changing tire sizes in the field. One 38-in. diameter cast wheel is used for 38 in., 42 in., or 46 in. rim/tire sizes. The 4055 and

Management Changes For Top Vermeer Officials

PELLA, IA. — Robert L. Vermeer and Mary Vermeer Andringa have been named chairman of the board/CEO and president/COO, respectively, at Vermeer Manufacturing Co.

The changes follow a three-year period when Vermeer and Andringa shared the office of president with their father, Gary Vermeer, who founded the $100 million company.

The announcement was made following a Board of Directors meeting at the firm which registered record sales and employment during its recently celebrated 40th year of operation.

The new 44-year-old chairman/CEO joined Vermeer in 1974 as director of accounting and ultimately was amed v.p. finance and executive vice president. Prior to that, he worked at the Marion County State Bank in Pella as vice president. He holds a B.A. degree in economics and business from Central College. He and his wife, Lois, reside in Pella with their three children, Dan, Heidi and Allison.

Andringa joined the family-owned organization in 1982 as director of market research. Since then, she has held several positions in the marketing, communications and human resource departments. More recently she served as v.p. administration and executive vice president. The new 39-year-old president holds an education degree from Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Mich. She and her husband, Dale, reside near Mitchellville with their two children, Jason and Mindi.

Vermeer, which just recently completed construction of its sixth manufacturing plant, is one of the world's leading manufacturers and marketers of hay harvesting, underground construction and tree-handling equipment, with offices scattered throughout the United States, Europe, Asia and the Pacific Rim.

Last December they surpassed the 1,000 employee mark — first time ever for the Pella-based firm.

Gary Vermeer, 70, founded the company in 1948 as a farmer after he invented a mechanical wagon and started producing them for local farmers in the Central Iowa area. Recently, Vermeer was recognized as the "Iowa Inventor of the Year" by the Iowa Patent Law Association, and received the "Iowa Business Hall of Fame Award" presented by the Greater Des Moines Committee.

John Deere's 4955 row crop tractor, one of a new line, is the company's first row crop tractor rated at 200 PTO hp. The "55" series has several new features including "auto" caster-action MFWD, IntelliTrak electronics, improved Sound-Gard body with increased visibility, and a new 7.6L engine.

Cyanamid To Help Growers Meet Conservation Compliance Requirements

WASHINGTON, D.C. — American Cyanamid Company has unveiled a program designed to help growers meet conservation compliance requirements contained in the Food Security Act of 1985.

Under those '85 Farm Bill provisions, growers with highly erodible land who fail to have conservation plans in place by the end of 1989 will lose eligibility for farm program benefits. Growers who file approved plans by the deadline have until 1995 to fully implement those plans.

The Cyanamid program is designed to help growers in two ways:

-- First, by working with the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) to help educate growers about the importance of developing conservation plans by the deadline, and helping them understand the alternatives available to them.

-- Second, by helping growers maintain profitable yields under reduced-tillage farming methods through a better understanding of these cultural practices and the weed- and insect-control options which best fit them.

Working directly with growers to achieve those goals will be more than 3,500 agrichemical dealers who are part of the Cyanamid AgriCenter™ dealer network, as well as the Cyanamid field and technical force, more than 300-strong.

"Cyanamid has always been committed to helping growers use their land resources wisely through the use of modern farming methods and careful chemical selection," notes Bill Griffith, vice president and general manager, Crop Protection Chemicals Department, American Cyanamid. "It is only natural that Cyanamid and the AgriCenter dealer network should now assume an active role in helping growers stay eligible for farm program benefits, while protecting their valuable land resources."

SCS officials estimate there are 143 million U.S. crop acres affected by the conservation compliance regulations. As many as one million landowners could be involved nationwide.

Deere Presents New

4255 use 400 lb. cast drive wheels and the 4455 through 4955 models use 700 lb. heavy-cast drive wheels as standard equipment.

Elimination of the wheel/rim clamps makes the wheels wobble-free. The wheels adjust easily with an optional bolt-on pinion adjustment tool. New "bolt-on" dual wheels (38 in. and 42 in.) are available for the 4055, 4255, and 4455 models.

New warranty

The 55 series row-crop tractors come with a new two-year, full-coverage warranty with unlimited hours and no deductible.

In addition, Deere has announced a Customer Protection Plan with extended coverage for five years from date of purchase with up to 5000 hours of use. The cost of this plan is based on the number of hours of expected use in a five-year period. The customer pays a $200 deductible per work order in the third, fourth, and fifth year of ownership.

Meridian Sponsors USDA Speaker At Dairy Day

READING (Berks) — Producing for maximum tonnage isn't necesssarily the most profitable way to grow forage crops for dairy animals, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official said recently at the Berks County Dairy Day in an appearance sponsored by Meridian Bank.

"About 10 percent of a farmer's hay should be the best crop he can produce," said Dr. Alan Rotz, a scientist with the Forage Research Center in Wisconsin. "The rest of it can be good to average quality, and even some low quality, without adversely affecting the dairy program."

Rotz spoke to a group of about 130 dairymen at the event held annually at the Berks County Agricultural Center. Meridian's Agri-business lending department also sponsored his appearances later in the week to groups in the Chester County and Bucks-Montgomery areas.

Top-quality hay, according to Rotz, is generally alfalfa containing 23% crude protein and no more than 38% fiber. Lesser quality hay has less protein and more fiber. Rotz pointed out that by lesser quality, he definitely did not mean barely palatable, heat damaged material.

"Early lactating cows should get the best hay you have," Rotz told the dairymen. "Dry cows and heifers can do very well on good grass hay or alfalfa with some rain damage.

"The point is, if you feed it right, a lot of your hay crop can be good to average in quality without really affecting your dairy program."

Rotz later commented that his philosophy is new and even alarming to dairymen who feel they have to manage their hay crops to get the maximum tonnage of high quality hay.

"It just hit home to me in the last year or so that that's really not true," said Rotz. "About 10 percent of a farmer's crop should be the best he can produce. If he has 50 acres of alfalfa, he should put a lot of management effort into his five best acres.

"I'm not advocating carelessness with the other 45 acres. But if a dairyman has other projects -- spending more time on his breeding program, for example -- he might be better off spending the time there than fine tuning production on all his alfalfa acreage."

Rotz is a Franklin County native who earned his undergraduate and advanced degrees in agricultural engineering at Penn State. He has been with the USDA's Forage Research Center for eight years. His developing views on forage management have been greeted with some skepticism, he said, especially among dairymen and even some of his colleagues.

"I presented some of my material recently during a conference at the Forage Center. Nobody disagreed with my figures, but nobody was really enthusiastic about what I had to say."

Rotz also presented some new thinking about harvesting to the afternoon sessions of all three dairy groups. Under development at the Forage Research Center is a

WATER QUALITY & MANURE MANAGEMENT

BY MITCHELL D. WOODWARD
Nutrient Management Agent

Two inexpensive farm management tools we can use to make better management decisions concerning crop fertilization needs are soil and manure testing. These tests are easy to take, take a short amount of time, and can pay for itself many times over in benefits to your wallet and drinking water quality. Keeping on top of your soil and manure analyses is an important part of good, sound farm management and can play an important part in farming for the best economic yield.

Soil Testing

Testing soil on a regular basis, usually once every 3 years, is the only way to accurately determine liming and fertilization needs. Fall is a good time of the year because you will have results in time to do some shopping. Late winter-early spring also can work because of generally shorter turn around time from labs, and you will still have time to shop for price and service. Whenever you test, think of the soil as a "soil bank." Like a monthly statement from your bank, the test results are your "statement" on the amount of nutrients already deposited and available for crop growth.

Remember, a soil test is no better than the soil submitted for testing. That 4- to 6-ounce sample you are sending to the lab for analysis represents 2 to 2½ million pounds of soil, so you can see the reason for accuracy. Sample to plowing depth in cultivated fields (usually 6 to 8 inches) and 3 to 4 inches in pasture. Taking samples too deep or taking too many samples in poorer sections of the field may give inaccurate results, increasing your input costs. Take at least 10-15 separate samples from each field tested, mix well, and take a second "composite" sample to send for analysis.

Nitrogen Recommendations

While soil testing accurately estimates the amounts of phosphrus and potassium needed by crops, determining nitrogen recommendations has been based on crop yields and removal. This method of determining nitrogen application rates is accurate, however, it may not take into account residual nitrogen from previous crops or manure/fertilizer applications unless you supply the proper information. To better determine residual nitrogen available in the soil, a soil nitrogen test will be available this season at Penn State Cooperative Extension offices, crop management associations, and crop consultants. This service will be available on a limited basis since this is the first year it will be available. It will be used at sidedress time. For more information on this new management tool contact your local extension office.

Manure analysis, in many ways is just as important as soil testing. Soil and manure test results form the base for developing a Crop Nutrient Management Plan. Spreading manure without an analysis is spreading fertilizer without an analysis. There are book values which estimate the nutrients available in manure -- but these are averages. Our studies have shown that these estimates are very accurate overall, however your farm may vary considerably from the average value. On work done in New Holland by Penn State agents, Leon Ressler and Jeff Stoltzfus, manure sampled from broilers averaged 47 pounds of nitrogen per ton. But the values ranged from 19 to 75 pounds per ton.

As with soil testing, take several manure samples from different areas in the storage, combine and send to the lab. Make sure the lid is tight! With bedded manure be sure to get a sample representative of the amount of bedding in the mix. With liquid storages samples can be taken while the storage is being agitated or emptied. If taken at this time results will not arrive in time for use this application. The sample should be more representative and will give more accurate analysis of the whole storage. Both soil and manure kits are available at extension offices.

Making use of these testing programs does not mean you will be using no commercial fertilizer, just increasing the efficiency with which you use them. Controlling costs of crop fertilization is one way you can better the bottom line.

Tillage Equipment May Be Deductible

ANNAPOLIS, MD. — Farmers may deduct the cost of purchasing and installing conservation tillage equipment from their gross income on their Maryland Income Tax Form. Legislation passed in 1986 allows farmers who purchased a no-till planter or drill after December 31, 1985 to receive a reduction in state taxes.

This deduction may be taken for used or new equipment. The legislation requires the equipment to have a useful life of four years and the purchaser to retain ownership for three years.

Eligible taxpayers need to file a certification form verifying their eligiblity with their state income tax. These forms can be obtained from the county soil conservation district. The Soil Conservation District will forward the paperwork to the Maryland Department of Agriculture for final certification. The process usually takes seven to ten days.

For further information contact your local Soil Conservation District or Louise Lawrence, Maryland Department of Agriculture 301/841-5863.

harvesting machine for hay crops that cuts the hay and presses it into a mat. The mat dries in six to eight hours, after which it can be removed from the field, probably with a modified round baler.

Rotz said they're working with a prototype in Wisconsin and that a commercial model of the mat harvested would probably cost around $30,000.

Dairy Day also featured a presentation on the crisis in farm labor by Bruce Kreider, a Penn State farm management specialist for Lebanon, Dauphin and Berks Counties. Pat Richie, an extension agent and ag engineer for Berks, Chester, Dauphin, Lebanon and Schuylkill counties talked about new farm building technology and the use of concrete. And Dr. Robert Graves, Penn State's extension ag engineer spoke on keeping cows comfortable.

Farm, City Join To Celebrate Ag Day 1989

RACINE, WI. — Each year since 1973 hundreds of communities celebrate Agriculture Day on the first day of spring.

Agriculture Day recognizes and honors the unmatched economic importance of farmers and agriculture to the U.S. economy.

* Less than 2.5 percent of the population, using only 60 percent of the potential production capacity, feeds 250 million Americans.

* Americans pay less for their food as a percentage of their income than the people of any other nation.

* Production, processing, distributing and marketing of food and fiber generate approximately 20 percent of the Gross National Product and 20 percent of national employment.

This year on March 20, members of the Agriculture Council of America Education Foundation and hundreds of other volunteers will sponsor events that create opportunities for increased awareness and understanding of the economic importance of the food and fiber industries.

Among Agriculture Day's highlights are a Capitol Hill reception in Washington, D.C. The reception serves to bring together urban members of Congress and their staff people with USDA officials, commodity group representatives, agribusiness executives and farmers. Together they celebrate Agriculture Day and promote cooperation between political leaders and all segments of the agricultural industry.

In Chicago, Agriculture Day volunteers will once again sell half-pound bags of popcorn for five cents per bag in the heart of the city's business district. The five-cent cost approximates the farmer's share of the total cost of each bag.

Other typical Agriculture Day events sponsored by local volunteers include:

• distributing packets of locally grown foods to state legislators and other political leaders,

• organizing displays or demonstrations in shopping malls and other public places, and

• supermarket events including offering to pay for all the food items in shopper's grocery cart to publicize the percentage of non-food expenses included in the typical "grocery" receipt.

Agriculture Day is part of Agriculture Week (March 19 to 25, 1989) which expands the opportunities for cities and towns to carry out programs that can increase public understanding of the vital place farmers, manufacturers of farm supplies and machinery, food processors and distributors and other agribusinesses have in the national economy.

The Agriculture Council of America Education Foundation has coordinated the national Agriculture Day effort since 1980. The ACA's efforts are founded on the earlier Agriculture Day efforts of the National Agri-Marketing Association (NAMA), the American National CowBelles and a number of agricultural cooperatives and agribusiness firms that continue to be active supporters.

For more information on Agriculture Day write to the ACA Education Foundation Inc. at 1250 I Street, N.W., Suite 601, Washington, D.C. 20005, (202) 682-9200.

State Auctioneers Group Holds Gathering

Highlighted by a championship bid calling contest, "fun" auction, auction advertising contest, and naming of the state auctioneer of the year, the Pennsylvania Auctioneers Association convention was recently held in Harrisburg.

The 3-day event drew some 220 auctioneers from all over the Commonwealth.

The tenth annual Pennsylvania Championship Bid Calling Contest was one of the evening features scheduled for this year's Farm Show visitors.

What does auctioneering have to do with the Farm Show? Agriculture is Pennsylvania's number one industry. When farms, livestock and machinery are sold, an auction is usually the method of sale. The association feels that the Pennsylvania Farm Show is a good way to promote the auction business to farmers.

The bid calling contest was open to any auctioneer licensed to practice the profession of auctioneering in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Each auctioneer was scored on speech and bid calling ability (chant), salesmanship and appearance. A panel of five professionals, including auctioneers, a livestock auction owner, Pennsylvania State Grange representative, president of the National Auctioneers Association, and others, served as judges for the event.

The auctioneer-contestants actually sold a wide variety of new merchandise to Farm Show spectators. Initially, all contestants sold an item during a warmup round. The actual judging took place during the next round when each auctioneer sold a second item.

The new state champion for 1989 is Ed Miller, York, who received a $200 cash prize and a plaque, while Larry Neuhauser, Lancaster, the runner-up, received $100 and a plaque. Those scoring third through tenth received an engraved gavel for their efforts. Those individuals were: Nevin Rentzel, Emigsville; Randy Betton, Ligonier; C. Sherman Allen, Conneaut Lake; Kenneth Hansell, Green Lane; Gerald Pennay, Kingsley; Sandra Brittingham, Waltersburg; Simon Miller, Hadley; and Eugene Zelmore, Mount Pleasant.

A "fun" auction was also held in conjunction with the association. As the name implies, this type of sale, although open to the public and conducted as an actual auction, allows the auctioneers to sell donated merchandise and their own personal items to each other as well as to the auction-goers. As can be imagined, "anything goes" during this sale! If anyone is caught scratching his head, he probably bought a vase!

Honored during the convention were state auctioneers whose past efforts at auction advertising excelled in that field. First place winners in a variety of categories, from real estate auction advertising to newspaper display classified, included Sanford Alderfer Auction Co., Hatfield; Kenneth A. Geyer Auction Co., Plymouth Meeting; Ronald Funk, Paradise; Barry Slosberg, Philadelphia; Stephen J. Barr, Gap; and Scott Younkin, Linden.

The highest honor bestowed on an individual auctioneer by the state auctioneers association is auctioneer of the year award. The group annually chooses one of its members who has served his local, state and national auctioneer associations in various capacities, has earned the respect of his fellow auctioneers, and has served as an example to others in the auction profession.

This year, the association selected Robert A. Reimold of Transfer as recipient of this prestigious award. In addition to conducting his own auction business, Mr. Reimold serves on the State Board of Auctioneer Examiners in Harrisburg, the licensure and regulatory body of auctioneers in the Commonwealth.

This year's officers of the Pennsylvania Auctioneers Association include Frederick L. Toomey, president, Hellam; Vernon L. Martin, first vice president, Harleysville; Wayne Patterson, second vice president, New Castle; and James E. Lewis, secretary-treasurer, Wyoming.

Pioneer To Offer Farm-Related Software

URBANDALE,, LA — For the fourth consecutive year, the Farm Program Option Viewer is available free of charge to farmers, ag lenders, farm broadcasters and agribusinesses.

The purpose of the software program, which has been developed and distributed by Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., is to help producers weigh their acreage reduction alternatives under the 1989 U.S. Farm Program.

The software program provides bottomline results in net profits or losses for a farm under three levels of participation in the Farm Program — non-participation, participation at the 10 percent acreage set-aside level, or participation when planting 10 to 25 percent of total base acres to soybeans or sunflowers, or 100 percent of total base acres to oats.

The Farm Program Option Viewer operates on any IBM® or IBM-compatible personal computer with at least 256K of memory and a Lotus® 1-2-3® spreadsheet program. Free diskettes may be ordered by contacting your local Pioneer sales representative or calling the Pioneer Product Information Center toll-free at (800) 338-5878.

As in past years, Pioneer has again encouraged its sales representatives, area sales offices, agronomists and ag lenders who have access to computers to run individual programs for those producers who do not have the required equipment.

In addition to the Farm Program Option Viewer, Pioneer has developed a full range of computer software designed to meet the specific needs of farming operations—including programs for financial management, crop and livestock production, marketing and word processing. As an added highlight, Pioneer carries a complete line of high-tech hardware—with everything from desktop to portable computers, color to monochrome monitors, and high-speed to letter-quality printers.

For more information on these and other Pioneer computer hardware and software products, call too-free (800) 338-5878.

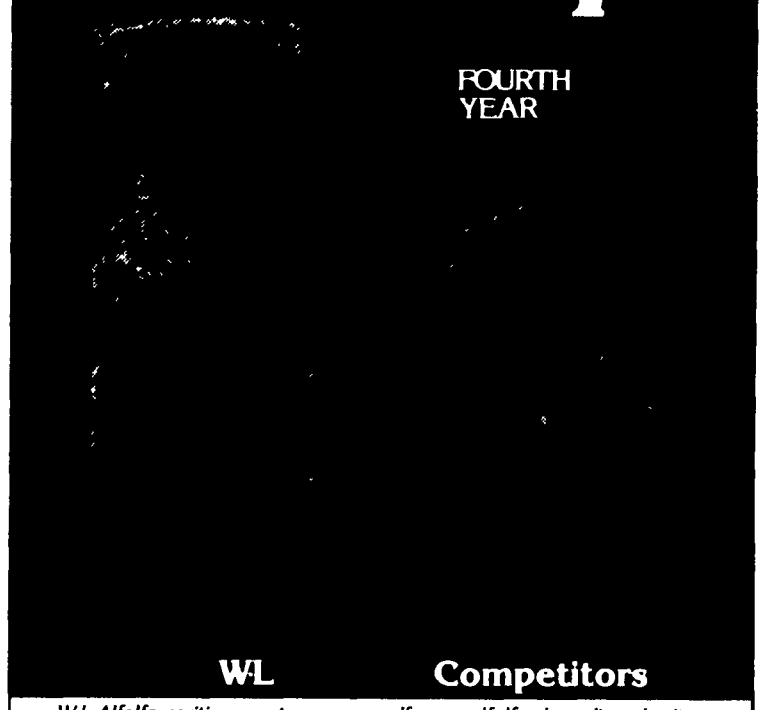
For Yield... W-L alfalfa stacks up.



W-L | Competitors

W-L Alfalfa varities are strong producers throughout the life of your stand. You can't afford to settle for less.

If your alfalfa doesn't make it to the fourth year, you've reduced the overall profitability of your crop.

In test after test by public and private researchers, W-L alfalfa yields stack up for profits. For more than 25 years, W-L alfalfa varities have been bred for long stand persistence, quick recovery after cutting, multiple pest resistance and extra leafy, fine-stemmed forage. With proper crop management, you'll have strong fourth-year yields that stack up for a profitable crop.

Learning From Our Friends Up North

During the first week of January, I had the opportunity to tour some dairy farms in southern and western New York, and in Woodstock, Ontario. I traveled with a small group of Engineers and Extension Agents from Pennsylvania and New York. The purpose of the trip was to look at a variety of dairy facilities, with special interest in naturally ventilated barns. We wanted to see how these systems worked in cold weather. We really picked a good week to do it; temperatures the first morning were about- 10° F., and the wind chill factor was about -20 to -30° F.!

Some of the goals of the dairymen we visited were: 1. to keep the barns above freezing so alleys could be flushed or scraped -- automatically or manually, 2. to reduce electrical demand and noise levels associated with fans, 3. to provide more comfort for the cows -- and for the workers, and 4. to reduce the amount of extra feed cows needed to maintain body temperatures on cold days.

If feed consumption does decrease, we need to ask is it because cows need to generate less body heat? Or, is it due to intakes being depressed by poorer quality air; if so, how will poorer quality air and lower dry matter intake affect health and production?

Curtain Walls and Insulation

We saw several freestall setups, most of which had four-row, drive-thru barns. The side walls consisted of insulated curtains plus a 3/4 to 1 inch plastic hardware cloth. Ceilings and end walls were well insulated, and there was no ridge vent. The curtains opened from the top and all the ventilation occurred through the side walls. Ceiling fans were used to circulate air in the barn year round, and many barns had halogen or mercury lights. The hardware cloth kept out birds, and bird roots were eliminated, depending on truss design and how the insulation was installed.

The system was designed to trap body heat in winter and it did keep the barns above freezing. Each side wall curtain was regulated by its own thermostat, which was adjusted to open the warm side first, and to leave a 6 inch opening when the curtains were in the closed position.

Air quality in these barns was good, 1. as long as the temperature was held below 36° F. on cold days, 2. when side wall openings were not obstructed, 3. when there was an eave or ceiling height of 12 feet or more, and 4. when 8-foot curtains were used in the side wall. When these principles were violated barns became foggy and stuffy. Keep in mind, we observed these barns on very cold days, when the curtains were up (in the closed position), and when there was very little air exchange.

I would like to visit these same barns during the fluctuating weather of spring and fall and during a hot, mucky, still, summer day. Reportedly, they work well, especially with 8-foot curtains -- even with no ridge vent; cows and workers liked to be inside.

An important point to remember, I think is, if we want to learn more about designing and managing barns in cold weather, we should look to our friends in the North Country and learn from their experiences; for hot weather ideas, we should look to the humid regions of the south -- but not to the arid regions. Then, ask what affects cows most in our area, cold weather or hot weather, and do we have more adverse winter days or more adverse summer days? Addressing these questions objectively can help us interpret what is being done by people in other regions and how we might adapt their ideas to our local conditions.

I, and our Penn State Engineers, are not sure that we want to completely seal off ridge vents in our area. An open ridge might be very beneficial in helping hot, trapped air to escape from the peak of the barn. However, an adjustable ridge opening might allow us to retain more heat in winter, while permitting us to vent it out in summer.

Curtain side walls could improve air quality and comfort in many of our local barns during warm weather. Insulating the roof or ceiling and the end walls gets expensive, but it can help retain heat in winter and reduce heat convection in summer.

Other Applications

Curtain walls are also being considered for parlors and holding pens, and even for tie stall barns. An alternative to curtains is a lot of roller doors, which can open up 50 to 66% of the side wall of the stable. In winter, the doors could be securely hooked to seal off drafts and to allow the barn to be ventilated with negative-pressure by exhaust fans; windows could be installed in the side wall and in the doors.

Naturally Ventilated Tie Stall Barns

A lot of naturally-ventilated barns can be found in the Woodstock, Ontario area. Also prevalent are gravity-flow and slatted manure systems. The barns we looked at had several flue chimneys, or an adjustable ridge vent.

Thermostates were used to control butterfly flaps located about 2/3 of the way up in the chimney, or to adjust flaps in the ridge vent. These adjustments were used to regulate the amount of air exhausted and to help prevent cold down drafts. Windows and other inlets were also adjustable, usually by thermostat. They regulated the amount of air coming into the stable. These inlets need to be evenly distributed, and when wide open, provide a total square footage equal to 3 to 4% of the square footage of the stable.

The flues were insulated -- a necessity, and ranged in size from about 4 ft. x 4 ft. to 4 ft. x 8 ft. Enough flues were installed to provide a total cross section area of 1% of the floor area. For example, a 40 ft. x 80 ft. stable has 3200 sq. ft. One percent of that is 32 sq. ft. One 4x4 flue provides 16 sq. ft.; two would provide the 32 sq. ft. needed. If two flues were used in this example, they'd be located 20 ft. in from each end of the barn, and would extend from the center of the stable to several feet above the peak of the roof. The flues are capped to keep out the weather, and the cap is positioned high enough to provide sufficient exhaust area for outflowing air.

These barns were quiet (no fan noises). They seemed to be well ventilated, and the air quality was good when the temperature was kept to about 40-45° F., and if there was sufficient animal density to produce enough heat to get air to exhaust, thereby creating an exchange of air.

One problem with flues and open ridges is cold air can come down one flue, or at one end of a continuous ridge vent, and go out the other. This could result in cold drafts and uneven ventilation. Thermostats can be used to regulate each flue, or to regulate separate sections of the ridge vent, to help prevent these problems, and these automatic controls appear to be a necessary component of the system.

Because of the low amount of body heat produced by calves, I am not ready to put calves in a naturally ventilated, well insulated calf barn. For me, there is insufficient air exchange to keep the air fresh enough to suit me. I continue to see better looking calves in open front buildings and calf hutches. Our challenge is to design a system that is healthy for the calf and humane for the worker -- at an affordable price.

Other Observations

Many of the Canadian farmers we visited like to house heifers on slats. They preferred the rough-surfaced, waffle-type of slat, and they liked the waffle slats with the large bar openings over those with smaller openings.

The larger dairies liked to bed with separated manure solids. It resulted in less mastitis, stayed in the stalls better, provided a spongy bed for cows, and it caused no problems with manure handling equipment. Composting was not necessary. The ideal moisture was about 70%. Screw-type separators were turning out solids at 70% moisture, ready to use as bedding with no additional processing. To get good separation and 70% moist solids, the manure had to be very well agitated before separation. One dairyman calculated that a cow produced about twice as much manure as she needed in the form of bedding; that cut manure hauling in half.

This was a very educational trip, and we plan to discuss some of these concepts on March 7 at the Lancaster County Dairy Days; the first day of Dairy Days is February 28.

Indiana County Crops, Soils Day Held

BY RANDY WELLS
Indiana Co. Correspondent

The winner in Indiana County's 1988 Five Acre Corn Club competition achieved a production level more than 20 bushels per acre better than the county average. But that county average was off 40 percent from 1987, and the cost of raising corn in the county was more than doubled over the previous year.

At the annual Crops and Soils Day program at Rustic Lodge in Indiana last week, David Elkin of Marion Center was recognized as the county's Five Acre Corn Club champion, with a production of 102.1 bushels per acre. Clair Braughler of Rochester Mills was the Five Acre Corn Silage winner, with a yield on 16.23 tons per acre.

William H. George of Shelocta had the best alfalfa fields in the Five Acre competition, with a production of 4.6 tons per acre.

According to statistics provided by Gene Schurman, county cooperative extension agent, Indiana County's average corn production in 1988 was 81.8 bushels per acre, compared to 138.3 bushels per acre the year before. Further 1988 corn analysis, Mr. Schurman said, indicated an average of 20,573 stalks per acre, 99.5 percent of which were standing and 8.1 percent of which were barren when the count was made.

Despite the summer drought, moisture content was actually higher in 1988 corn than 1987 corn, and the number of barren stalks decreased from '87 to '88, he said. 1988 moisture content in Indiana County corn averaged 29.9 percent, up from 24 percent in '87.

"The plants sucked up moisture in the late August rains, then wouldn't give it up," Schurman said.

The incidence of barren corn stalks declined from 8.7 percent in 1987 to 8.1 percent in '88.

Perhaps the most significant statistic revealed was the cost of production figures. Schurman said the average cost of producing a bushel of corn in Indiana County in 1988 was $2.76, compared to $1.29 in 1987.

The average corn silage yield in the county also declined dropping from 24.26 tons per acre in 1987 to 12.75 tons per acre in '88, he said. However, the cost per acre for silage also dropped from $234.71 in 1987 to $218 in '88.

There was little significant change in the county's alfalfa crops between the two years, Schurman reported, with the high yield being 4.6 tons per acre in both '87 and '88.

The Crops and Soils Day program, attended by about 140 farmers and 15 commercial exhibitors, also offered local farmers the chance to pick up three credits needed for keeping pesticide and herbicide spraying licenses current. Dennis Culley of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture updated the farmers on changes in the pesticide licensing procedures, and Ward Stover, director of the Indiana County Cooperative Extension office, discussed pesticide safety.

Penn State Extension agronomists Robert Hartzler and Lynn Hoffman presented programs entilted "Weed Control Update for Corn, Small Grains and Alfalfa," and "Corn Update." And another Penn State agronomist, Elwood Hatley, gave his thoughts on "Cropping Strategies in Periods of Environmental Stress." "Crop Insurance - Should You Buy It?" was the subject of a presentation by Mark Kooker, the Western Pennsylvania area claim specialist for the USDA Federal Crop Insurance program.

Honored at the Indiana County Crops and Soils Day for their proficiency were, from left, William H. George of Shelocta, a five-acre alfalfa club winner; David Elkin of Marion Center, a five-acre corn club winner; and Clair Braughler of Rochester Mills, a five-acre corn silage club winner. With them at far right is Stan Fabin, extension agronomy chairman.

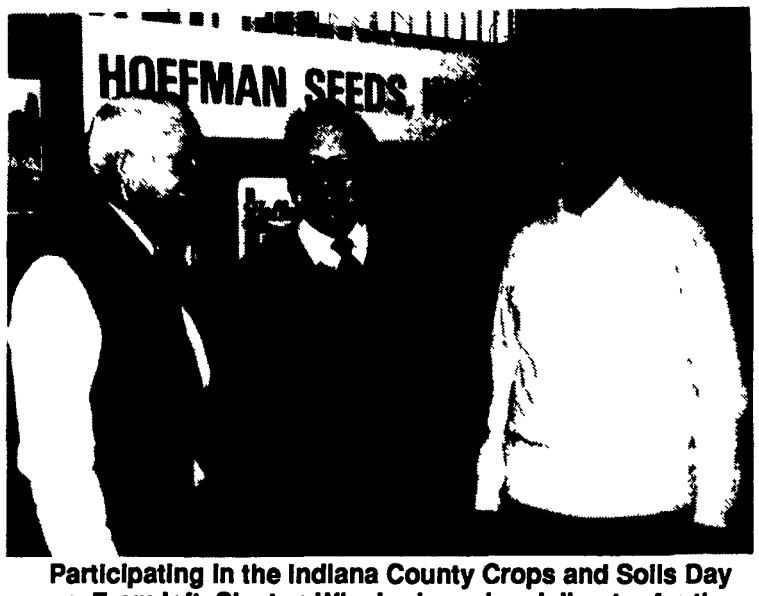
Kooker said while only 2 to 5 percent of Pennsylvania farmers currently have some type of crop insurance, nationwide about half of all crops are insured.

In the plains states, for example, where farmers grow only one or two major crops, insurance is almost a necessity to protect against financial ruin. In the East, where farmers generally grow a more diversified selection of crops, insurance is not as common. The exception in the East, however, is the state of Delaware, where about 20 percent of all crops are insured. Federal crop insurance has been available in some parts of the country since 1938, Kooker said, and everywhere in the nation since 1981.



Participating in the Indiana County Crops and Soils Day were, From left, Clayton Winebark, regional director for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture; Tom Mikesell, regional manager for Hoffman Seeds and recipient of a certificate of recognition for outstanding service to cooperative extension; and Larry Allison, vice president of Indiana County Cooperative Extension Board.

In Pennsylvania this year, farmers may insure apples, barley, corn, forage production, forage seeding, grain sorghum, grapes, oats, peaches, potatoes, soybeans, sweet corn, tobacco, wheat and tomatoes, either for canning or processing or for fresh markets.

The insurance covers loses caused by "acts of God," such as drought, floods, freezes or frosts, hail, wind and uncontrollable diseases or insects. Farmers may choose policies which guarantee 50 percent of an average yield, 65 percent or 75 percent, Kooker said. And they may select from three different price choices for a total of nine options.

The premium cost is determined by several variables, including the percentage of an average yield the farmer wants the policy to guarantee and the amount of the indemnity payment he wants to receive for each bushel or pound of loss.

As an example, Kooker said for a 65 percent guarantee on a field of corn which normally produces 100 bushels per acre, the premiums would range from $3.90 per acre to $6.76 per acre.

Ultimately crop insurance deals with risk management, Kooker said, and a farmer needs to decide how much of the total risk of farming he wants to shift to insurance.

Business always increases following a growing season like the drought-plagued summer of '88. In Armstrong County alone, he said, 100 more farmers have taken out policies since last summer.

"It's a disaster program," Kooker said. "It's not designed to make you money. It's designed to keep you in business."

Corn Conference To Be Held In March

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — The Fourth Annual Pennsylvania Corn Conference will be held at the Penn Harris Inn in Camp Hill on Wed., Mar. 1, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The conference is cosponsored by the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, the Pennsylvania Corn Industry and Penn State Cooperative Extension.

NFU Leader Wonders How FmHA Will Handle Workload

WASHINGTON, DC — National Farmers Union (NFU) President Leland Swenson said recently that he doubts the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) will be able to process tens-of-thousands of loan restructuring applications within a statutory 60 day period and still work out the best deal for borrowers, lenders, and taxpayers.

In testimony before the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee on Ag. Credit, Swenson said, "It is inconceivable to us how, with all the (restructuring) applications coming in at roughly the same time, agency employees can be expected to meet their deadlines and still provide the kind of interactive negotiated process that Congress envisioned to seek out the least-cost alternative for resolving debt problems."

FmHA sent delinquency notices to over 90,000 farm borrowers in November advising them of debt restructuring opportunities. The agency must now process those applications within 60 days under provisions of the 1987 Agricultural Credit Act.

Swenson said he hoped FmHA would be up to the task given the crunch of other loan servicing duties facing the agency. Not only must FmHA handle the restructuring applications, but it still must meet its obligations to borrowers for this year's planting season and implement the operating loan refinancing portion of the Disaster Assistance Act of 1988.

"It reminds me of trying to put 10 gallons of manure into a 5 gallon pail," Swenson said, describing the tasks facing FmHA. "It is our hope that the program will be carried out as intended by Congress with the best interest of the borrowers and taxpayers protected."

The farm organization also urged Senate members to be aware of the tax implications that the loan restructuring program presents those involved. NFU General Counsel David Velde noted that the granting of conservation easements in debt settlements, the use of shared appreciation agreements, and the liquidation of some farm assets in the restructuring process all have income tax implications that must be addressed by Congress.

In his testimony, Swenson pointed out that the Agricultural Credit Act did not deal with FmHA alone, but also impacted the activities of other farm lending sectors, including the Farm Credit System.

Swenson urged the Subcommittee Members to hold hearings on how well the other sections of the Act were being implemented by the parties involved.

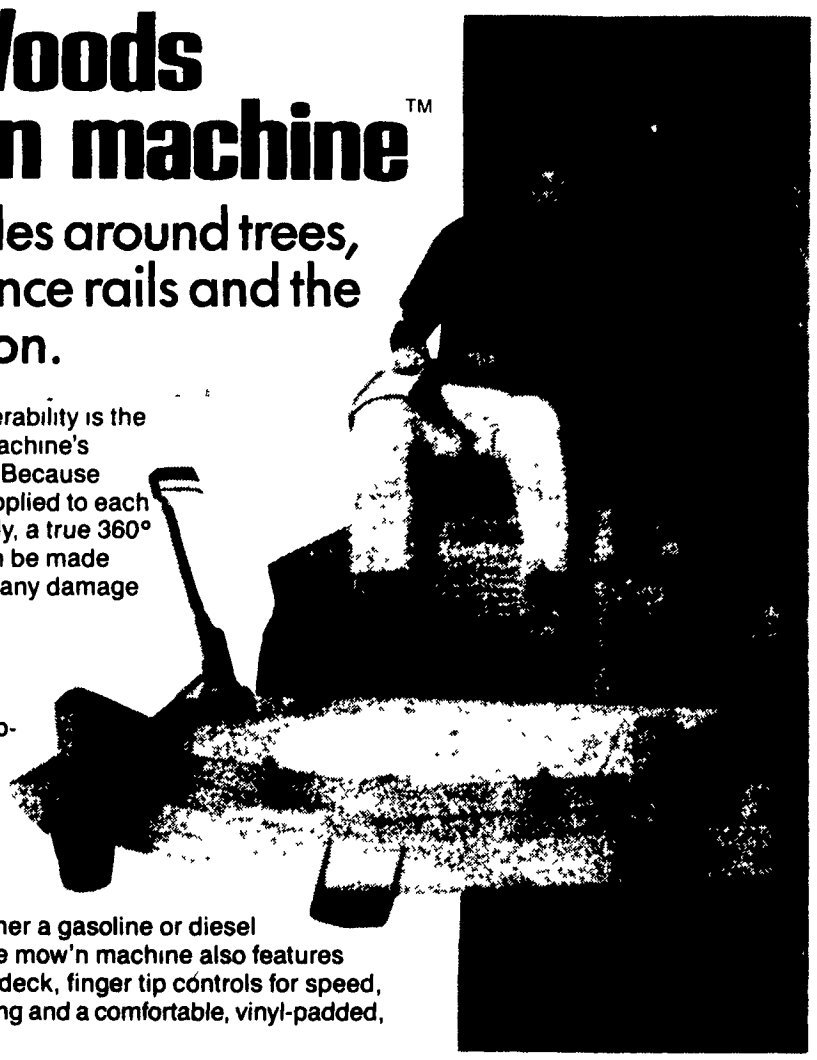
The Woods mow'n machine™

It runs circles around trees, shrubs, fence rails and the competition.



Maximum maneuverability is the key to the mow'n machine's growing popularity. Because engine power is supplied to each wheel independently, a true 360° zero radius turn can be made smoothly...without any damage to your lawn.

And the mow'n machine makes all the right moves... even in those hard-to-reach places. That keeps you from having to double-back for time-consuming follow-up trimming.

Available with either a gasoline or diesel powered engine, the mow'n machine also features an out-front mower deck, finger tip controls for speed, direction and breaking and a comfortable, vinyl-padded, driver's seat.

Adding versatility to the mow'n machine is easy with these easy-on, easy-off attachments:

Grass Vac 8 cu. ft capacity Slide-in Nylon Bag

Grass Vac 13 cu. ft. capacity Metal Hopper

Snow thrower with cab clears a 47" path

Dozer blade clears a 48" path

Sweepster™ brush cleans a 48" path

ture, served as greenhouse foreman while at Twin Valley. She also has helped with floriculture crops at Delaware Valley. Additionally she has worked for a local greenhouse. Ann was a very active Twin Vally FFA chapter member, having served as chapter vice president and chairman of the Food for America committee. She also was the Pennsylvania Achievement in Volunteerism winner in 1986.

Kim, a 1988 graduate of Twin Valley High School, received the horse proficiency award. Currently a freshman at Penn State's Berks campus, had a horse project before entering agriculture classes at the high school. She worked part time at a local horse stable. Kim has received numerous awards related to her horse project including county and state record book awards and area and state horse judging awards. Kim also served as a chapter officer and was active in other chapter activities.

Kevin, a 1987 graduate, received the agricultural processing proficiency award. Kevin had been employeed by Tobi-Hill Farm in their meat-processing operation. Kevin also had worked on his grandfather's dairy farm and had dairy animals as projects. Kevin served as both county and chapter president in 1987. He participated in the state salesmanship, interview, and dairy foods contests. He won awards in dairy judging, recordbook keeping, and public speaking. He was a member of the chapter's parliamentary procedure team. Kevin is employed currently by Nissley Feeds as a dairy consultant.

State proficiency winners received a plaque and check for $100. The agricultural processing award was sponsored by the Carnation Company; the floriculture award was sponsored by the Paul Ecke Poinsettia Ranch, the Lerio Corp., and the American Floral Endowment; the horse proficiency award was sponsored by the American Quarter Horse Association.

Currently attending Delaware Valley College with a major in ornamental horticulture, Ann Kline of Birdsboro recently was presented the state's floriculture proficiency award.

Lancaster County Record Book Contest

The Lancaster county FFA Record Book Contest was held on Wednesday, Feb. 1 at Elizabethtown High School. The contest is a culmination of a year of record keeping for FFA members across the county. Members are judged on the accuracy, completeness and neatness of the records and efficiency and profit of their projects. Books are put in categories according to the projects or enterprises that were kept. Seventy record books from six high school agriculture programs in the county were entered in the county.

FFA members now will enter their books in the state competition to be held February 17 at Penn State University.

Birkett Mills To Increase Acreage Contracts

PENN YAN, NY — Cliff Orr, vice president of The Birkett Mills announced recently that their company will be contracting for more buckwheat acreage in 1989 and the price per hundredweight is expected to be up over 1988's $10 contract price guarantee.

"Due to an increased demand for our buckwheat products, prices will be stronger and the outlook for acreage guarantees will be up," Orr stated.

He also feels that many farmers will be including buckwheat in their 1989 planting plans, realizing that it's not the total cash return per acre that is important, but what is left after the cost of all inputs are deducted.

"Since buckwheat does not require the over-increasingly expensive inputs -- little or no fertilizers, no insecticides or herbicides, little or no cultivation (can even be planted as a second crop as late as July) -- net return per acre compares favorably with traditional cash crops," Orr continued.

Orr also feels that confronted with the uncertainty of future markets, reduced government programs, and the projected downward price pressure on the traditional cash crops, buckwheat contracting at a guaranteed price and market is looking better and better for many farmers.

For more details about contracting acreage, growers may contact The Birkett Mills, 163 Main Street, Penn Yan, N.Y. 14527, or phone 315/536-3311.

Maryland Depots Stock Seven Poison Antidotes

COLLEGE PARK, MD — A group of heifers wanders into an unattended barn and placidly consumes large quantities of a rodenticide before being discovered by a frantic farmer. Without prompt doses a Vitamin K1, they will die.

Most veterinarians, however, don't stockpile large quantities of such poison antidotes as Vitamin K1 because their uses are limited and their expiration dates make large-scale storage expensive and impractical. So the poisoning of a large number of farm animals often initiates a frantic search for sufficient quantities of the appropriate antidote.

But not anymore. Dr. Douglas K. Carmel, a veterinarian with the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, and Dr. Michael W. Radebaugh, a veterinarian in Parkton, Md., and a past president of the Maryland Veterinary Medical Association (MVMA), have organized the beginnings of a statewide depot system that will give licensed veterinarians emergency access to large quantities of seven poison antidotes.

"When you're dealing with a poisoning, time is of the essence," says Carmel. "We think the antidote depot system will help veterinarians save animals' lives by reducing time needed to get the necessary antidotes."

Carmel got the idea for a depot system from an article about a similar system in Nebraska in the "Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association" (JAVMA). As depot coordinators, he and Dr. Radebaugh gathered the necessary information, decided which antidotes to stockpile, created the necessary forms and located two volunteer clinics.

"We really appreciate Dr. John Fowble of Timonium and Drs. Neil Corselius and Jeffrey Head of the Glade Valley Animal Hospital near Frederick for volunteering to store and dispense antidotes at their clinics," says Carmel, who hopes to add a depot site on the Eastern Shore and in southern or western Maryland.

The depot system is administered by the MVMA, which provided $5,000 in start-up funds and is responsible for invoicing, reordering and stockpiling the antidotes -- atropine, methylene blue, calcium EDTA, sodium nitrite, sodium thiosulfate, vitamin K1 and activated charcoal -- at the participating clinics. Initial stocks of atropine and vitamin K1 were donated by Penn Veterinary Supply, Inc., of Lancaster, Pa.

Carmel stresses that the depots are for emergency use only.

"The stockpiled antidotes are for catastrophic poisoning occurrences involving large numbers of animals," he says.

Available only by veterinary prescription, they can be dispensed to the authorized representative of a requesting veterinarian.

"Because time is an important factor in poisoning treatment, veterinarians may wish to begin some form of treatment immediately," Carmel explains. "By permitting them to send someone else to pick up the antidote, we allow them to perform their job better."

To ensure that antidotes are used only for legitimate purposes, practitioners are required to call ahead and provide their name, address, phone number, name of client, type of animal involved, tentative diagnosis, and current State veterinary license number when making a request. This information is recorded on a triplicate form that must be signed by both dispenser and recipient. One copy of the signed form is sent to MVMA, one copy is retained at the depot and a third is given to the person receiving the antidote.

When picking up antidotes, practitioners or their representatives receive a set of guidelines prepared by Carmel and Radebaugh describing the uses, dosages and methods and precautions for administering the antidotes maintained by the depots. They also can request a table of conversion factors for various weights and measurements.

The depots charge no service fee. MVMA bills participating veterinarians for the replacement cost of the antidotes. It is up to the veterinarians to seek reimbursement from their clients.

Carmel emphasizes that use of the Maryland Antidote Depot is not limited to Marylanders.

"Our goal is to serve practitioners throughout the Mid-Atlantic region," he says.

He adds, however, that the depots are not poison information centers. Veterinarians who have questions about the incidence, diagnosis, treatment or prevention of poisoning in animals should call the National Animals Poison Information Network Regional Centers in Georgia, (404) 542-6751, or Illinois, (217) 333-3611. Both centers offer 24-hour phone service.

Addresses and phone numbers for the Maryland Antidote Depots are: Glade Valley Animal Hospital, Inc., 8032C Liberty Road, Frederick, MD, (301) 663-5591, and Dr. John C. Fowble, 201 W. Timonium Road, Timonium, MD, (301) 252-1922.

Prevent Egg Damage By Layers

Herbert C. Jordan
Associate Professor Of Poultry Sciences

Why do egg laying pullets or hens peck at or eat their own eggs? Abnormal say most poultrymen, normal says the female doing it. It could be a normal reaction to boredom but an abnormal condition.

Most specialists will tell you this behavioral disorder is not easily understood.

To prevent cracked or broken eggs from females that peck at them, consider the following:

1.› Use a roll-out nest or cage where egg is moved by gravity out of reach of the bird.

2.› Darken nest or roll-out tray so egg is not seen by the bird.

3.› Select only healthy birds from a breeder with a history of shells on eggs that do not break or crack easily. Any bird will eat an egg once broken.

4.› Gather eggs and remove them from the laying house constantly, frequently or at least three times a day. Too many eggs in one place, like a nest or roll-out tray, causes breakage.

5.› Remove an egg breaker and eater if one habitual hen is found in a flock. Some birds get this habit and will not break it.

6.› Design everything to not allow any bird to reach any egg after it is laid.

7.› Repair roll-out trays that break eggs because they are so steep which causes eggs to roll too fast or stop too abruptly.

8.› Install nests, cages, roll-out trays, gathering belts, elevators, orientor trays so as not to break eggs because broken eggs have an odor that brings any egg eating animal to it.

9.› Instruct people not to allow broken eggs in the presence of birds.

10.› Provide an adequate environment for layers.

11.› Feed layers an adequate diet.

12.› Provide adequate fresh, clean, unpolluted water for layers.

13.› Feed calcium grit or oyster shell every afternoon on top of mash at the rate of 1 pound per 100 birds/day or as needed.

14.› Feed granite grit to all birds over 12 days of age at the rate of 1 lb/100 birds once a week.

Canada-Maryland Collaboration Could Involve Angus, Horses

COLLEGE PARK, MD. — A recent visit to the University of Saskatchewan by University of Maryland animal scientists holds promise of resultng in a gene pool that could preserve for posterity the unique characteristics of the world-renowned Wye Angus herd, located since 1938 on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

The visit was coupled with a trade mission to western Canada in late November, which was headed by Wayne A. Cawley, Jr., secretary of the Maryland Department of Agriculture. The visit was part of Governor William Donald Schaefer's on-going trade initiative.

Acquired by the University of Maryland 10 years ago, Wye Angus have consututed a "closed" herd since 1948;' no outside bloodlines--either cows or bulls--have been allowed. The herd thus represents a unique gene pool for Angus cattle.

For practical purposes, the University of Maryland has tentative plans to reduce the size of its Wye Angus herd. But once the animals are sold and bred to other cattle, the uniqueness of their bloodlines is lost. Specific gene traits or heredity characteristics would not be traceable.

The problem has been to find a way of preserving the genetic information available without having to maintain a large number of animals.

One solution--which is fairly costly--would involve collecting unfertilized eggs from the cows and semen from the bulls. These materials would then be preserved by freezing. The eggs could be fertilized with semen by a test-tube process and transferred into "mother" cows using embryo transfer techniques. Calves could be produced as the need arose.

However, Dr. Sheila Schmutz in the Department of Animal and Poultry Science at the University of Saskatchewan has suggested a much less costly approach. Dr. Schmutz's laboratory has equipment that is capable of preparing DNA extracts ("genes") and tissue samples from large animals and preserving these materials indefinitely.

Dr. Dennis C. Westhoff, animal sciences department chairperson at the University of Maryland, sees hope that a collaborative project involving the Saskatchewan laboratory thus will be able to save for posterity the unique heritage of the Wye Angus herd.

The project also should give a valuable lift to the University of Saskatchewan, Dr. Westhoff notes, since it will provide a gene bank for comparative studies on the general progress of Angus cattle genetics.

He reported that Canada's Dr. Schmutz has accepted an invitation to visit Maryland in April. She will present a seminar on her work and make final plans for developing the proposed collaborative project.

The University of Maryland's animal sciences department is interested in developing a program in equine biomechanics and locomotion studies. And it has recently received administrative approval for hiring two new faculty members in the equine area.

Maryland's Dr. Westhoff hopes that Dr. Leach's visit to College Park will result in another collaborative effort with the University of Saskatchewan.

Stripcropping, Crop Rotations Help Save Soil

LEESPORT (Berks) — "In Berks County contour stripcropping and crop rotations are two of the most widely used conservation practices to help reduce soil erosion", says John Fior, soil conservationist with the USDA Soil Conservation Service. Stripcropping is the arrangement of crops in strips along the contour on broad uniformly sloping fields or across the general slope on fields where irregular topography makes contour stripcropping impractical. Buffer strips of hay and small grain are established between strips of corn and other row crops to reduce soil erosion. Long field slopes are laid out in strips so that surface water runoff cannot travel far enough through row crops to erode much soil. Soil carried through row crop. Strips will be filtered out by small grain and hay strips below. The velocity of surface runoff water will be reduced. Strip width is determined by soil conditions such as subsurface drainage, soil permeability, soil erodibility, and slope steepness. Soils that are less permeable, poorly drained soils, highly erodible soils, and soils with steeper slopes require narrow strips. "It has been found that on strips wider than 120 feet soil erosion becomes too severe within the strip because of slope length", says Fior. "On strips narrower than 60 feet too much runoff water from row crop strips above hay and small grain strips reaches row crop strips below", adds Fior.

Good crop rotations are an important part of stripcropping. "Land capability class or the capacity of land to produce crops, the erodibility of the soil, and livestock feed requirements are important factors in determining the kind of crop rotations used", says Fior. Crop rotations which provide strips of hay and small grain alternating with strips of row crops and other crops are the most effective arrangement of crops for reducing surface water runoff and cropland erosion. Generally longer rotations of row crops, small grains, and cash crops are permitted on gentle to moderately sloping ground with well drained erosion resistant soils. These crops may be cultivated for four, five, six or more years depending on conditions. The use of winter rye or annual ryegrass cover crops to protect the bare soil during winter months when erosion is critical is strongly recommended. Alfalfa and clover hay rotations on these soils may be relatively short, perhaps two, three or four years. Hay rotations must be longer on wet, poorly drained soils, highly erodible soils, or on steeper slopes. Hay may be required for four, five, six or more years. Hayland should be permanent on the steepest slopes. Row crops should be cultivated for only one to two years to reestablish the hay crop.

"In summary, stripcropping and good crop rotations are a must for saving topsoil", says Fior. Because topsoil is more fertile, fewer cash expenditures are needed to maintain soil fertility and farming is more profitable.

If you would like additional information on saving your topsoil contact the USDA Soil Conservation Service office located in the Berks County Agricultural Center in Bern Township.

Farmers Without Conservation Plans Soon Will Be Ineligible For Federal Programs

READING — In less than a year, farmers without conservation plans will not be in compliance with the 1985 Farm Bill and will not be able to participate in any government farm programs, according to William D. Hughes in the most recent issue of Meridian Bank's Ag Letter.

Hughes, who is a vice president in Meridian's Agri-Business Lending Department said that farmers who have conservation plans and who are following them will continue to be eligible for crop insurance, Farmers Home Administration loans, acreage set-aside payments and other programs.

The new emphasis on farmland conservation was written into the farm bill which is formally known as the 1985 Food Security Act. It gave farmers five years to get their conservation plans together. As of Jauary 1, 1990, their five years are up.

"The 1985 Farm Bill has more teeth than any other piece of farm legislation ever to come out of Congress," said Hughes. "Its goal is to stop cultivation of environmentally fragile wetlands and highly erodible slopes."

Hughes said that if the goals of the Farm Bill are met, some 45 million acres of marginal cropland will be placed in a nationwide conservation reserve program.

Featured in the Ag Letter is Bruce Leatherman, a Schuylkill County crop and dairy farmer who figures government payments account for 10 to 20 percent of his total farm income. The article focuses on Leatherman's strategies for staying in compliance with the new government regulations. His task is complicated by the fact that a lot of the ground he farms is rented.

In another article, Meridian Ag Lender Doug Darling talks with Terry Stehr about the impact of the conservation guidelines. Stehr is executive director of the Schuylkill County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

Stehr said there's nothing compulsory about the new legislation. If a farmer assumes he'll never request benefits of any sort from the government, he doesn't need to worry about a conservation plan. But that, according to Stehr, "...is a very risky assumption."

The "Meridian Bank Ag Letter" is a quarterly public letter sent to farmers in Meridian Bank's service area. A limited number of extra copies are available by calling toll free 1-800-222-2150.

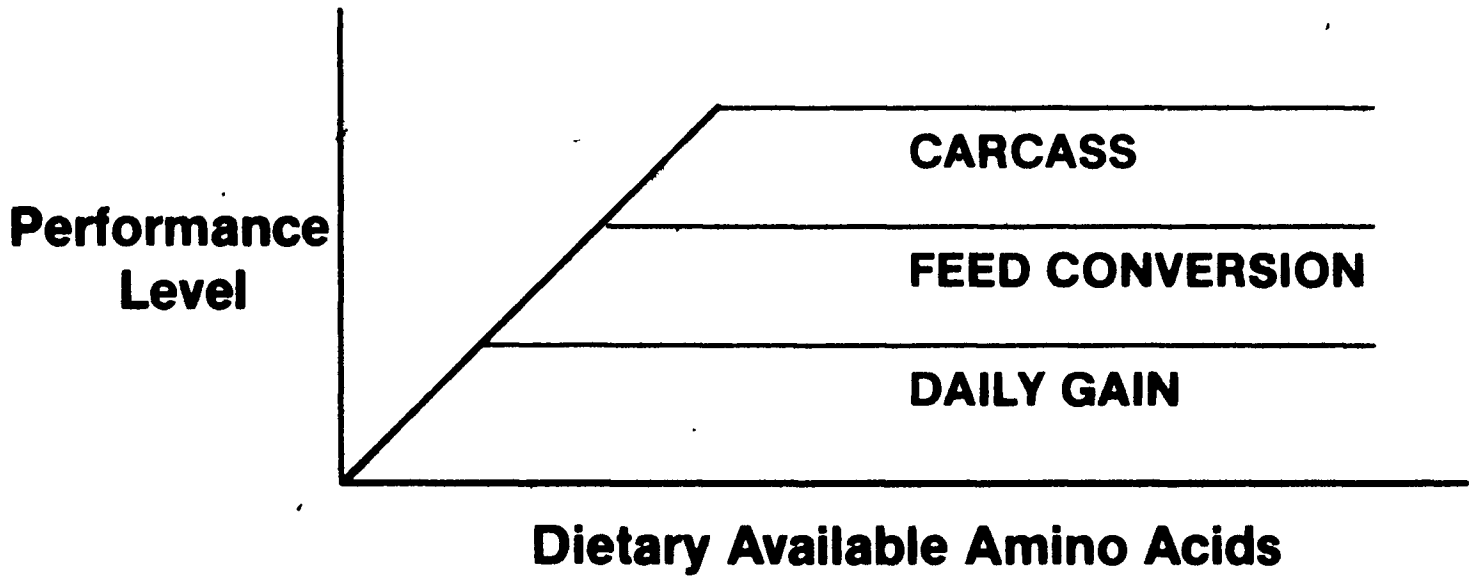
Nutrition Plays an Important Role In Pork Carcass Development



How does sex affect performance and carcass? Do barrows and gilts require the same protein levels to maximize gain and efficiency? To maximize carcass development?

Larry Weaver: A Born Farmer

BY LISA RISSER

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster) — Most of what can be seen from Larry Weaver's front porch is his. This includes a 150-sow farrow-to-finish operation that produces 2,600 hogs, 160-head herd of feeder cattle, and two adjoining farms with 200 acres. Not bad for a 43-year-old man who started out with 45 acres of rented land, rented equipment, and a debt. Not bad for Lancaster County where prime farm land goes for around $12,000 an acre.

Weaver also owns some Potter County woodland with a cabin and rents about 200 acres of Lancaster and Berks county land on which he grows corn, wheat, soybeans, tobacco, oats, alfalfa, and barley.

"I've never been short on ambition," Weaver stated, and it was through hard work and ambition, that Weaverland Valley Farms was built. Weaver and his accomplishments recently were recognized when he was named a Master Farmer by Penn State Cooperative Extension and Pennsylvania Farmer.

"I started out really small," Weaver recalled. "When I came here (to the home farm), the place wasn't much: the silos weren't here, the self-feeders weren't here, the pigs weren't here, and the house needed work."

Weaver rented the land, building, and equipment from his father, a part-time farmer who moved aside to give his son an opportunity. Weaver supplied the 30 steers and 2,500 laying hens; he farmed with a 200 Farmall, a one-bottom plow, manure spreader, and several implements.

He had a good first year followed by a tough summer when three hailstorms in one week destroyed half his tobacco crop. At this time, "My goal was to prove to myself and a small group of people that I could farm and meet the challenges," said Weaver.

Meet them he did as in subsequent years he purchased his cousin's feeder-pig operation, increased the number of steers, dropped the egg business and converted the building into a 90-sow farrowing house.

Striking paydirt

Then in 1975, everything came together for Weaver. "That was the year that put me on the roll," he said. "We were feeding a lot of steers, about 330 head; there were steers in every corner. I bought them in Virginia as feeder calves at 38 to 40 cents a pound. At the end of June beef prices went up. By the end of July, they were 50 cents a pound...I sold the whole bunch for (an average of) 57 cents a pound."

Shortly after Weaver cashed in, prices began to drop, and he loaded up on calves in Virginia at the same price he paid the year before.

"After that things went easier," he commented. "I began spending money more freely; it was a growing time in the '70s."

In 1976 he purchased his uncle's farm where he had been feeding out cattle, thereby attaining part of his dream to own that farm and the home farm. Weaver also purchased Potter County land at this time. "I really felt important then," he said with a laugh.

Weaver also updated his equipment. In addition, he was named Pennsylvania's Outstanding Young Farmer by the U.S. Jaycees.

About this time he began finishing out his pigs and built a gestation house and a two-room, 24-crate farrowing house. He converted the old farrowing house (formerly the chicken house) to all nursery space and stopped feeding cattle at the upper farm. A year later, 1980, he converted that cattle barn into a finishing barn, where he each year currently finishes all but 600 pigs, which he contracts out to other farmers for finishing.

During the past eight years he has remodeled, added grain bins, and replaced buildings with a farm shop and 4-H/FFA barn.

Buying the home farm

In 1979, after 10 years of renting his father's land and buildings, Weaver decided he needed something on paper. "We drew up an agreement that (my father) would cover what I spent on the farm if it was sold, based on my unused depreciation," Weaver related.

By 1986, Weaver had sunk more than $100,000 into the farm, and because he was eight years into the agreement, it would only cover 20 percent of that in case of sale.

"That's the scary thing: when you have all that money into something and you don't own it!" exclaimed Barb, Weaver's wife.

That year, Weaver purchased the home farm.

Weaver runs his operation with the help of his family, which includes Barb, Jodie, and another daughter, Kristin, and a full-time employee, Eugene Zimmerman.

Weaver's 150-sow farrow-to-finish operation produces about 2,600 hogs per year. All but approximately 600 are finished on the farm; the rest are contracted out to area farmers.

Good recordkeeping and other related management skills have helped Weaver achieve his success.

Both girls, active participants in 4-H and FFA, share their father's love for steers and consistently show champion-quality animals. They also branched out into market lambs. Barb also enjoys working with cattle and has begun her own herd of pure-bred Angus.

Key to success

"In the beginning, hard work was the key to success," said Weaver. "At that time markets didn't fluctuate and I didn't pay attention to commodity prices and input costs because they didn't fluctuate. But in the mid-'70s inflation hit and at that point it was important to look at those factors. I made some wrong decisions and some right ones. So long as you make right decisions 51 percent of the time, you'll come out ahead."

Weaver kept his hog numbers level and took the highs with the lows. With cattle he tried to outguess the market and had his share of good guesses and complete misses. He runs about 150 cattle now, but "I'm cutting back slowly on cattle because the investment is too big for what I get out of it," he explained. "It's not what I want, but economically I have to."

The fourth-generation farmer sells pigs every week, thereby providing a constant cash flow. "The thing I like about hogs is that you don't have everyone reaching into your pie. I can do everything by myself. We go direct to the packer with no middlemen as with cattle."

Community involved farmer

During the past 22 years Weaver has been involved actively in community affairs. "There was a time where I was out every night with some meeting or another," he remembered. "I was too involved for a while."

"We decided a couple years ago that since the girls had five years left in 4-H, we would channel our energy toward them," commented Barb.

"I switched my extra time to their activities," Weaver added. "They need me now, and they won't be here forever."

This doesn't mean that Weaver isn't still active in his community. "I tried to stay active with 4-H because it did so much for me. I feel it's part of my duty to help kids—pay my bill," he said. Consequently Weaver is a leader for the Red Rose 4-H Baby Beef Club. He also is on the Ephrata Fair and LanChester Swine Producers boards and is a member of the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce's ag committee.

Weaver finds time for Barb by sharing their common interest: hunting. "We go to the mountains together," he said.

"It's fun," Barb chimed in. "It's like heaven to me."

The two spend time in their cabin, which is located just miles from the New York state border. They hunt deer, turkey, and bear. Barb, whom Weaver taught to shoot, has bagged a doe six out of the seven years she's been hunting.

Farming has changed much in the past 20 years. "It's much more high tech now," Weaver said. "We didn't know what genetics and pesticides were then. The capital required to make a reasonable profit at the end of a year is much higher too. I feel I got started in a nick of time.

"I probably would be dumb enough to farm if I was just beginning now, but it would be much more difficult," he added.

Weaver always wanted to be a farmer: "I guess it was born in me," he commented. As a toddler, instead of napping he would stand at the window crying that his father needed him to help with the tobacco until his mother let him out. He also would play farmer with his brother, using spent shells of different colors to represent rows of crops.

The only one left in the Weaver family to still be farming, he has a love of farming that has helped him through tough times. "Farming and the accomplishment of surviving and being profitable has been rewarding to me," he said with satisfaction.

Weaver's only regret is that he didn't take time out to attend college, not that he feels he would have necessarily used it in his farming, but that it would open his options for the future. "I don't know if I want to farm forever," he said.

Now that he has achieved his major goals, owning the two farms and becoming a Master Farmer, Weaver is re-evaluating and considering his future. "I would like to own some more land, except for the prices in Lancaster County."

Weaver is a man who enjoys the freedom of farming. His pleasure in his work and his love for the land are reflected in his every word and action. Whatever his next goals should be, they're sure, somehow, to include farming.

Farm Credit Changes Benefit Borrowers

DENVER, CO — Farmers and ranchers can look forward to a more stable and competitive credit environment when they seek financing in 1989, according to officials of the Farm Credit System. The pronouncement came as the borrower-owned farm lender approaches the first anniversary of the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987, enacted January 6, 1988.

"The credit situation in agriculture has improved substantially in 1988," said Sam G. Eberly, Farm Credit System director and chairman of the Farm Credit Corporation of America. "Barring some unforeseen crisis in the ag economy, we expect even more improvement in 1989 as the Farm Credit system continues its recovery."

Eberly credited the System for having made "significant changes to bring competitive interest rates back to American agriculture and to assure producers a dependable source of credit for the upcoming season. The 1987 Act didn't guarantee our future," he added, " but it did give us a chance to earn it. I'm proud to see that the farmer-owned System has responded."

Among other provisions, the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 established a mechanism for providing financial assistance to qualified Farm Credit System institutions. It also expanded borrower rights and gave System stockholders new authorities to reorganize the System's structure and pursue alternative methods of capitalization

Eberly explained that the System's new pricing philosophy, rededication to customer service and new loan products like fixed- and adjustable-rate loans are being well received by borrowers. With stockholder approvals, System banks and associations in many parts of the country are also pursuing new methods for generating permanent risk ckapital and reorganizing to streamline operations and enhance customer service.

"In many ways, this is not the same Farm Credit System that people knew as recently as one year ago," said Eberly. "The last couple years have caused us to rethink the way we're doing business and to make some pretty significant changes. Strengthened by our reorganizations and stabilized by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987, today's Farm Credit System is again focusing on meeting the needs of its member-borrowers.

Performance indicators are up in virtually every aspect of the business. At the end of the third quarter 1988, the System reported its fifth consecutive quarter of net income. Loan quality is up and nonearning assets have been reduced dramatically. Other financial indicators are equally positive. System loan volume has stabilized for the first time in five years and its average cost of loan funds is down significantly from record levels set in 1982.

In addition, Eberly noted, the Farm Credit System continues to work with borrowers in financial trouble. Since 1986, the System has restructured more than 62,000 loans valued at $8.3 billion. In the first nine months of 1988 alone, the System restructured $2.1 billion in problem loans as the least cost alternative to foreclosure. This amounts to one-fifth of all high risk loans at year-end 1987. During the same period, foreclosures in process declined 39 percent.

"No other farm lender has done more to help borrowers in financial trouble than the Farm Credit System," Eberly said. "And it's being done at the same time we're reaching out to borrowers in strong financial standing with better products and service. These developments in the Farm Credit System bode well for farmers and ranchers in the years ahead."

Make Plans Now For The Pennsylvania Holstein Convention

STATE COLLEGE (Centre) — Three weeks until the big hoedown in the Wild, Wild West! On February 20-21, Holstein breeders from across the state will gather at the Sheraton-Shenango Inn at West Middlesex for the Annual Convention. Time is flying, and you won't want to miss this roundup, so read on, and get those reservations in before you're out of time.

HOTEL: The Sheraton Inn is easily accessible as it is located just off I-80 at exit 1-N. No big city hassles, traffic jams, or loud noises, just the wide open spaces of the Wild, Wild West. The hotel offers a luxurious indoor swimming pool surrounded by lush greenery in the tropical courtyard. Other attractions include a whirlpool, sauna, exercise room, lounge, and unique gift shop. There will be music in the lounge each evening of the Convention.

EARLY ARRIVALS: If you've a long way to travel, extend your vacation a day and come in on Sunday. A hearty welcome awaits you, and a special evening has been planned. Chairman Bob Dickson will be showing "Highlights of the Satellite Sale." This is a unique opportunity you won't find many other places. Refreshments will be served for your enjoyment also.

DIRECTORS: The Pennsylvania Holstein Association Board of Directors will meet Monday morning at 10:00.

WORKSHOPS: After noon, Rex Powell, USDA research geneticist, will speak on the new Animal Model. Following will be Doug Dan from United Breeders in Canada speaking on Canadian sire evaluation.

CRAFT SHOW: Local crafters will set up in the tropical courtyard so you can browse and shop and enjoy their crafts right up until sale time.

SALE: This year's sale cattle will be housed at the Leroy and Mark Canon farm just five miles from the Sheraton. You are invited to take a sneak preview of these fine sale cattle before Monday evening. At 7:00 p.m., the promenade of 65 top quality Holstein through the hotel ballroom will begin. This sale will have its own western flair according to the committee.

AWARDS BREAKFAST: The presentation of the Association's annual awards will take place Tuesday morning. For your breakfast, you will have the choice of a hearty country breakfast buffet with all the trimmings, or a light continental breakfast.

LADIES PROGRAM: This year's ladies day will be a "day of fun" at the luxurious Oak Tree Country Club. The morning program includes demonstrations on ladies scarves and porcelain dolls, and a snappy presentation by Vonnie Kaye Brough on "Through Grandma's Attic." Following a delightful luncheon, the group will board buses for a tour to several spots in the area. First stop will be Volant Mills, a restored feed mill that now houses several antique and craft shops. Wendel August Forge is next where you will see unique giftware items that are hand forged from aluminum, bronze, copper, pewter, and sterling silver. Finally, you will stop at Steeces Ice Cream Shoppe for a delicious treat of homemade ice cream.

ANNUAL MEETING: The Pennsylvania Holstein Annual Meeting will begin following the awards breakfast. Keynote speaker for the meeting will be Devon Woodland, president of National Farmers Organization.

BANQUET: A courtyard reception will kick off the finale of this convention at 6:30 p.m. The meal will feature none other than western prime rib. The Hall of Fame awards will be the highlight of the program. Foot stompin' country music will follow, so get set to kick up your heels.

FREE TIME: Another highlight of this Convention is the amount of free time scheduled to allow you a relaxing time away from home. There will be plenty of options to keep you busy, but you are free to choose what and when you will do them. You may want to take a swim, see the sale cattle, enjoy the craft show, relax in the whirlpool, read a book, talk with friends, or just rest. Whatever you choose, have a great time!

Come to the Wild, Wild West! Deadline for reservations is February 6, and you don't want to miss this great hoedown planned just for you.
